POLITICAL PLOTTING CHARGED

Former Licensing Board Head Tells How Politicians Came to Him with Personal Pleas

Charles R. Gow, relieved from the office of chairman of the Boston Licensing Board by Governor McCall, in a statement issued today, charges that Democratic politicians came to him constantly and asked him to suspend action in certain cases and to compromise with small discontented factions among liquor dealers.

"This I positively refused to do," says Gow, "and I was then advised by these men, who were more experienced than I in forecasting the results of political activities, that my attitude was sure to result in defeating Governor Walsh for re-election.

"At about the same time agitation was commenced by various Republican politicians, including a United States Senator, seeking to make the board's affairs an issue in the gubernatorial campaign.

GOW WAS DISGUSTED.

"Thoroughly disgusted with the entire situation, I called on Governor Walsh and told him that, in spite of my earnest endeavor to eliminate politics in all its forms from the board's activities, the workers of both his own and the opposition party seemed intent on making them a campaign issue and that, if political considerations were to be the controlling factor in our determinations, I could no longer remain a member of the board.

"The Governor promptly assured me that he heartily approved of the attitude of the board upon all the matters complained of and that under no circumstances would he accept my resignation if it were offered.

"He further informed me that there was much specific cumulative evidence in his possession to the effect that certain elements among the liquor interests of Boston were seeking relief from

Baby Falls 35 Feet to Street and Is Unhurt

Ruth Colson, year-old daughter of Mrs. Emily Colson of Webster street, East Boston, fell from the piazza of the third floor today, a distance of thirty-five feet. But at the East Boston Relief Station it was said she was unhurt. Doctors examined her carefully, while the baby crowed delightedly at them. They could find no damage done, but decided to keep the baby at the hospital for observation.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 2.—Miss Lyra Brown Nickerson, aviator, crack tennis player and heiress to a $6,000,000 estate, has announced her engagement to Henry G. Clark, assistant athletic director at Brown University and who has been described by President Faunce of that institution as a "model young man."

The wedding will take place October 4 at Miss Nickerson's Providence home.

Miss Nickerson is one of the heaviest stockholders in the Brown-Sharpe Manufacturing Company, inheriting her wealth from her mother.

She recently came into public notice when she persented to the Rhode Island National Guard a fully equipped aeroplane.

She herself is an aviator; she has flown over Berlin in a Zeppelin, and has made aeroplane flights with Miss Ruth Law and with Instructor Wright of the Rhode Island naval militia.

Miss Nickerson is an expert swimmer, an autoist of some skill, an outdoor girl of the most pronounced type, and so fond of tennis that she spent $15,000 in constructing an indoor court in Providence, where she has entertained some of the best tennis players of the country.

Her Providence home is at No. 71 Angell street, just across from Brown University.

Clark, whom she is to wed, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Clark and comes of another old Rhode Island family.

Their romance, it is said, had its inception at a reception given by Dr. Faunce, president of Brown.

Disaster Overtes Party Out for Day's Sa Three Others Saved by Hs's Good Work

John Baker,n eighteen-year-old Dorchesteroy, was drowned today in Donester Bay, 400 feet from lan off Fox Point, Savin Hill, by te overturning of a sailboat in wich he and three other boys hadgone for an outing.

The three othe boys—Joseph Connaughton, seventeen, of Greenmount street; Edward Nonan, fifteen, of No. 1312A Dorchesteravenue, and Dennis Sweeney, eighteen, of No. 20 Roach street, were thrown into the water, but were saved, largely through the efforts of Connaughton.

The boys had borrowed a twenty-two-foot sailboat from a friend at Coulter's wharf and at 8 o'clock left the Standard Oil wharf at Freeport street for a day's sailing. All went well until they tried to tack off Fox's Point, when wind currents caught the sail and broke some of the halyards, causing the mainsail to fill. This threw the boat over on one side, finally overturning it.

Baker, who had been ill, was seen to struggle in the water and then go down, never to come up. Connaughton, the best swimmer, went to Sweeney's assistance and swam with him to a nearby boat. He then came back and took hold of Noonan, who was going down for the second time, and brought him safely to the boat.

FRENCH RENEW DRIVE

Paris Declares Continued Success in Picardy Will Result in Peronne's Fall; Verdun Clash

By CHARLES F. BERTELLI, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Aug. 2.—French troops have resumed their offensive in Picardy. They have made progress on both banks of the Somme river, the War Office announced today.

Continued success in these operations is expected to result in the speedy fall of Peronne, thus threatening the great German salient, which has been under attack since July 1.

The War Office communique states that fierce fighting took place last night on the right bank of the Meuse at Verdun. The Germans made numerous attacks, using gas shells to overcome the resistance of the French troops, but were able to gain only a little ground at Vaux Chapitre and Chenois woods.

The text of the official communique follows:

"North of the Somme we captured a powerful fortified work between Hem and Menngo.

"South of the Somme we occupied a German trench northwest of Denseourt, taking several prisoners.

"In Champagne, west of Aubrives, Russian reconnoitring forces charged and dispersed a German detachment at the point of the bayonet.

"On the right bank of the Meuse, along the La Chapitre and Chenois front, a violent struggle continued all night. After many unsuccessful attacks, in most of which asphyxiating gases were used, the Germans gained a little ground in La Chapitre wood. Elsewhere they were repulsed, with severe losses. We took 160 prisoners.

"Along the Somme front our aviators yesterday showed great activity. A total of thirty-three aerial encounters took place over the lines of the enemy. One German aeroplane, attacked by two Nieuport machines, was seen to fall in flames, while fourteen other German machines, seriously damaged, were compelled either to land or were seen to dive down within their lines."

WILSON REFUSES TO ENTER IN CONTEST

Washington, Aug. 2. — President Wilson today declined to enter into a crowd-drawing contest with Charles Evans Hughes, his Republican opponent for the presidency. Senator Ollie James of Kentucky, headed a delegation that urged the President to speak at Winchester, Ky., on September 5. On that day Mr. Hughes speaks at Lexington, Ky. The President will be at Hodgensville, Ky., to attend the Lincoln birthplace memorial exercises September 4, and Democratic leaders wanted him to stay over the next day and make a political speech. He declined.

Gallivan Demands U.S. Break With England

The immediate termination of diplomatic relations between the United States and Great Britain was demanded in Congress this afternoon in a resolution introduced by Representative James A. Gallivan of Boston, Washington dispatches say.

The preamble recites that Joseph Smith of Massachusetts and Eugene Hughes Kelley of New York, recently dispatched to Ireland with funds for the relief of the destitute families of Irish revolutionists, were refused admission.

The resolution then provides:

That in view of the insulting treatment accorded these and other Americans and other impudent and insulting acts of Great Britain toward American commerce, that a recommendation be made to the President of the United States that the diplomatic relations between the United States be terminated at once.

The resolution was referred to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

KING ACTS TODAY ON CASEMENT REPRIEVE

London, Aug. 2.—A final decision whether King George will grant a reprieve for Sir Roger Casement, committing the prisoner's death sentence to life imprisonment, is expected to be announced today.

According to the present schedule, Casement is to be hanged tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

All is ready for his execution. A larger named Ellis, of Rochdale, is the executioner. His fee will be $25.

The only ones present at the execution will be officials of the Pentonville prison, where the prisoner is now confined in the death cell, and in the courtyard of which the execution will take place.

Rumors were in circulation today that Casement would be granted a reprieve, but these were not based on any available official information.

Travis Huffy, solicitor for the condemned man, said he knew nothing of any decision with regard to carrying out the death sentence.

Premier Asquith acknowledged the receipt of a long Irish petition begging a reprieve for Casement, but did not indicate that it would have any effect.

Mr. Duffy later stated that Casement's relatives had strong ground for believing that there would be no reprieve.

Senate Appeal for Casement Forwarded.

Washington, Aug. 2.—President Wilson today instructed Acting Secretary of State Polk to forward to the British Foreign Office immediately the resolution adopted by the Senate last Saturday in which the hope was expressed that the British government "may exercise clemency in the treatment of Irish political prisoners."

The resolution was intended to bring the attention of the British government to the Roger Casement case, but his name was not mentioned in the resolution. Following is the text of the resolution:

"Resolved, that the Senate express the hope that the British government may exercise clemency in the treatment of Irish political prisoners; and that the President be requested to transmit this resolution to that government."

Railroad Men Firm.

The 25,000 members of the Railroad Brotherhoods in New England are practically a unit in favoring a strike, if the demands for an eight-hour day and other concessions are refused, according to the general chairmen of the unions who have left for New York with the result of the local referendum.

21,000 CAR MEN MAY STRIKE IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 2.—This city is threatened with the greatest strike in its history—a struggle in which the union leaders declare 21,000 men will drop work on the surface, elevated and subway lines and completely tie up the city's transportation system.

City officials admitted today that the situation was "very serious."

Theodore P. Shonts, president of the New York City Railways Company, has announced that he will refuse to deal with the union. Threats by the street car officials that they would have State troops called out in case of a strike only served today to increase enrollment in the union.

Hundreds of employes of the trolley lines in Queens County and on Staten Island joined the union today. The union organizers said this afternoon that their work was being rapidly completed and that a tie-up would be called unless the men's demands were granted.

MORE BAY STATE BABY PLAGUE VICTIMS

Two new cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the State Department of Health today. Raymond Carter of No. 119 Snow street, Fitchburg, and James McCann of No. 51 Springfield street, Lawrence, are the latest patients.

Reports of fresh outbreaks of the disease are still coming in. The daily average for the first two days of August, if continued throughout the month, would bring the total number of cases for August nearly as high as the July mark. During Jul 110 cases were discovered in this State.

FLEET ON GUARD OFF CAPES

Patrols Move in Close to Three-Mile Limit as German U-Boat Starts on Her Thrilling Voyage

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 2.—There are several allied warships waiting off the Virginia capes to prevent the escape to the open sea of the German merchant submarine Deutschland.

At Virginia Pilots' Association headquarters it is said latest reports from the allied patrol vessels indicate they have moved in as close to the three-mile limit as possible. Three have been seen, two British and one French. It is reported they have been reinforced since last week by a number of fast converted merchant liners, strewn out in fan-shaped formation and patrolling a distinct lane.

Steaming slowly down Chesapeake Bay, the Deutschland today is headed for the deep water off the Virginia Capes. Reports reaching here and Newport News indicate that the big submersible is keeping well to the eastward of the regular ship channel.

This is believed here to be due to the desire of her commander, Captain Koenig, to prevent any interference with his vessel from any of the tramp liners flying the flags of the enemies of Germany which are scattered from the Capes to the mouth of the Patapsco River.

ALLIES SET TRAP.

No one here has the slightest idea of what are the intentions of the doughty little skipper of the submarine. Whether he will head right out through the Capes under cover of the darkness of tonight or whether he will linger in some of the deep land-locked bays which dot the shores of the Delaware, Maryland and Virginia peninsula for further tests of his engines, or will follow out the original program and steer into Newport News for a stay is a secret locked in Captain Koenig's breast.

Scattered off the Capes is a great fleet of French and British warships and converted merchantmen. Their scouts are close in, where they can keep close watch on the waters about the treacherous inlet. The mails squadron, however, is believed here to be across the waters of the Southern drill ground, ready for the signal by wireless that the Deutschland is at sea and fair play for her pursuers.

GERMANS GIVE COUNTER-BLOW

By International News Service.

Petrograd, Aug. 2.—Terrific fighting in progress between German and [Ru]ssian forces on the west bank of [th]e Stokhod today. The Teuton army [re]sisting the Russian advance on Kovel has been heavily reinforced and is attempting to drive the Czar's troops out of the position which they captured west of the Stokhod by a brilliant charge.

Reports thus far received by the War Office state that the German counter attacks have been fruitless. The Russian artillery on the east bank has inflicted terrible losses on the German infantry. That the Teuton commander regards the lost positions as of vast importance is indicated by the fact that in several instances the infantry was ordered to attack without artillery preparation.

The belief at the War Office is that the next few days are likely to see the Austrian and German forces so effectively separated that it will be impossible for them to co-operate further.

The well-conceived strategic plan of the Russian general staff, it is asserted, is working out admirably. It was discovered too late by the Austrian-German commanders for them to take effective steps to prevent the splitting of their armies.

New British Gain in Somme Fighting

By SYDNEY B. CAVE,
Staff Correspondent International News Service.

London, Aug. 2.—British forces have gained further ground east of Pozieres, in the Somme region, the War Office officially announced this afternoon. The capture of enemy trenches was reported. A German counter attack at Highwood, delivered during the night, was repulsed, the statement says. The War Office statement follows:

"Further progress was made in hostile trenches east of Pozieres, where fighting at close quarters between small detachments has been in progress. A hostile counter attack delivered late yesterday evening against new trenches west of Highwood failed to get through the artillery barrage."

Allies Repulsed in Somme, Berlin Says.

By International News Service.

Berlin, Aug. 2.—All French and British attacks in the Somme sector were repulsed by the Germans, the war office announced today. Further ground was gained by the Teutonic forces in the Verdun sector, in the region of Thiaumont work. The capture of 923 men and fourteen machine guns was announced.

On the eastern front, Russian attacks at Lake Nobel and in the Stokhod salient were repulsed.

The War Office isatement follows:

"Eastern front.—In the northern section there are no incidents to report. Southwest of Pinsk, Russian operations repeated on both sides of Lake Nobel extended to the region of Lublescow on the Stokhod. Everywhere they were repulsed.

"Several Russian attacks on the Stokhod salient northeast of the Kovel-Rovno railway broke down under our curtain of fire. The enemy repeatedly assaulted our positions between Witoniez and Turija, regardless of losses he suffered. All his efforts were without success.

"Army of General von Bothmer—Local attacks in the region west of Wisniowwxzya on the Stripa near Wilesniow and on the Koropiec failed.

Western front—North of the Somme, in the sector from Maurepas to the Somme the enemy made a vain attack in the evening after the defeat of a local enterprise against Monacu farm. On the Maricourt-Clery highroad the enemy penetrated as far as our demolished trenches. His losses were considerable.

"South of the Somme there were some local engagements at Belloy and Estrees.

"On the right bank of the Meuse we made some progress northwest and west of Thiaumont work. We captured a hill and salient northeast of Ft. Souville and pressed the enemy back to Mountain and Forest, also in the small laufes wood. We captured nineteen officers, 923 men and fourteen machine guns.

MISTAKE IN FRYATT CASE, BERLIN THINKS

By International News Service.

Geneva, Aug. 2.—Dispatches from Berlin report that the opinion is growing among German politicians that the execution of Captain Fryatt was a mistake, as it restored to England the sympathy of those neutrals most exasperated by the British blockade.

WAR SUMMARY

The heaviest fighting reported today was on the Russian front, where the Russians have for three days been making a tremendous effort to break through the German lines from east of Kovel to the Dneister.

The Russian attacks seem to be made largely with human projectiles, as the heavy bombardments reported in the early stages of the Russian offensive are no longer mentioned.

At no point on the whole line have the Russians made any gain for two days, so far as can be judged by a comparison of the reports. The Germans still hold the Stokhod line from east of Kovel to Kiselin, headwaters of the river. Thence the line runs to the west of Brody; thence southward. The capture of Brody is the only gain the Russians have effected in some three weeks of fighting.

The Russians claim several gains, but they claimed the same gains three days ago, and two weeks before that. Even a casual reading of the war bulletins with their frequent mention of the Stokhod shows that the fighting is stationary. The Russians have "crossed the Stokhod," every day for three weeks.

The German attempt yesterday to crush in the northern and southern sides of the allied salient in Picardy failed.

The Germans made a slight gain against the British, while the French made a slight gain on the southern line.

Attempts by the British and French to push the salient toward Maurepas and Guillemont likewise failed.

In general, the only changes in this line since a week ago Sunday have been the capture of Pozieres by the British and the French advance east of Hem.

The Italian front, as usual, yesterday was active, but nothing of importance developed.

The Russians in the Caucasus claim to be pushing on toward Sivas. The Turkish defence in the east centres on that city, which is the end of the railroad from Constantinople.

EVICTION IS URGED TO FEED GERMANY

London, Aug. 2.—The Rheinisch Westfaelische Zeitung has discovered a solution of the German food problem. It argues from statistics it has unearthed that the enemy territories occupied by the German armies produce seven times the quantity of wheat and rye necessary to supply the whole population of Germany.

If such inhabitants of these territories as are useless to the conquerors be evicted, it says, the empire's grain requirements are assured.

DUTCH SHIP SUNK BY A SUBMARINE

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 2.—The Dutch ship Zeeland, 1,203 tons, was sunk by a German submarine in the North Sea, says the South Shields Gazette. The crew was allowed to take to the boats before the vessel was torpedoed.

FORBID MUNITIONS SHIPMENTS AT N. Y.

By International News Service.

New York, Aug. 2.—To prevent another explosion such as that at Black Tom Sunday morning, the Jersey City commissioners have ordered the railroads to stop shipping war munitions from the piers of New York Bay. The railroads will fight. They are expected to ask for an injunction.

Simultaneously it became known that Brooklyn is menaced by a similar peril. It was declared that a flotilla lay off the Gravesend shore, loaded with far greater quantities of high explosives than those which caused the Black Tom catastrophe.

"The explosives in Gravesend Bay are sufficient to blow up all New York City," said the assistant United States district attorney.

COMMISSION NAMED TO APPRAISE APPAM

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 2.—On motion of counsel for the South African Steamship Company, British owners of the steamer Appam brought into Hampton roads as a prize of war by Lieutenant Berg of the German commerce destroyer Moewe, Judge Waddill in the United States District Court today named a commission to appraise the value of the vessel. This action was taken preliminary to hearing a motion to turn the vessel back to her former owners in accordance with Judge Daddill's decision of last Saturday.

MALDEN TAX RATE IS REDUCED $1.40

The Malden tax rate for 1916 will be $21.40 a thousand, it was announced today, a decrease of $1.40 from last year. One of the chief reasons for the reduced rate is because the United States Supreme Court has ruled that bills receivable in New York, due the Boston Rubber Shoe Company, are taxable in Malden, where the plant of the company is situated. The total valuation of the city is $43,846,591, an increase of more than $1,000,000 from last year.

ITALIANS REPULSE AUSTRIANS

By International News Service.

Rome, Aug. 2.—Attempts by the Austro-Hungarian forces to drive the Italians from the positions recently captured by them on Monte Cimone were repulsed with heavy losses, the Italian War Office announced today. The Austro-Hungarians were also repulsed in attacks in the Topana region and in the Forcella wood, the statement says.

The official report follows:

"Further information shows the serious nature of the enemy's defeat in the Astico Valley Monday. After a bombardment of the whole line between the Tovo and Assa Valleys the enemy made a demonstration at Mt. Seluggia and Castelletto and also attacked on Monte Cimone. He was defeated with very heavy losses.

"In the Topana region the enemy's efforts at Forcella wood were fruitless. Afterwards he bombarded Cortina d'Ampiesso. We replied by bombarding villages in the Drave Valley.

"In the upper Dogano Valley the enemy fired several incendiary shells on Fornia Voltri. We retaliated by partially destroying Mauthen in the Gail Valley.

"As enemy aircraft had on Saturday attacked Italian open towns on the lower Adriatic without any military object, one of our strong Capronl squadrons yesterday bombarded the submarine works three kilometres west of Fiume. In spite of the heavy fire of the anti-aircraft artillery and attacks by enemy aeroplanes, we succeeded in dropping four tons of high explosives, causing much damage to the works and setting them on fire.

"During the fight an enemy aeroplane was brought down above Muggia. One of our machines was observed landing near Volosca. The others returned safely."

U-BOAT ON PERILOUS TRIP

will be an interesting game of hare and hounds that will be on within the next fifteen hours.

The allied cruisers will steam in close to the Capes with nightfall tonight and their searchlights will swing to and fro across the waters in an effort to pick up the submarine. Agents of the allies, with swift yachts and motorboats, are on the waters of the lower bay watching to signal the approach and the course of the Deutschland, when she appears.

But there is an air of absolute confidence in German circles here that is hard to understand. Among the crews of the interned German vessels here absolute confidence is expressed that the Deutschland will be successful in her effort to complete her return voyage.

GERMANS CONFIDENT.

Shortly before 11 o'clock the British scouting cruisers, which had been in sight from the capes, drew further out to sea, while the neutrality patrol vessels of the United States Navy took up their positions within easy distance of the three-mile limit.

Advices from Tangier Island, which was passed by the submarine about 4 o'clock this morning, stated that she had had an uneventful trip down, having moderated her gait to accommodate the tug Timmins, which was acting as escort. The German representatives of the North German Lloyd line at Newport News expected that the Deutschland would dock there during the early afternoon and had made elaborate preparations to see that she was not interfered with in any way.

By 12 o'clock the early morning haze had disappeared and the air was perfectly clear, and objects could be picked up at a very great distance. The neutrality patrol of the United States was very much in evidence outside of the Capes.

The Flusser and Reid, destroyers, were steaming back and forth outside of the three-mile limit. The North Carolina drifted about with only enough power to make her steerable, under the guns of Fortress Monroe.

Prince von Hatzfeldt-Trachenberg, counsellor of the German embassy, was in Norfolk prepared to complete the appeal which the German government is to take to the decision of Judge Waddill that the British liner Appam is not a lawful prize of war although captured at sea by the commerce raider Moewe. The Prince had been consulted by the officers of the Deutchland, but he smiled blandly when questioned regarding her plans.

The German representatives here began an effort to get in touch with the Timmins. At that time the exact whereabouts of the Deutschland was something of a mystery. The last actual report concerning her came from the Windmill Point Light. It said that the Deutschland had passed the lighthouse south of Tangier Island—and west of Watts Island shortly after nine o'clock this morning. At that hour the submarine and her tender simply were steaming along and were hugging the Eastern shore side of the main channel.

LAUNCHES HOVER ABOUT.

An incoming tramp reported that the allied patrol was not in sight off the Capes. It is believed here that they have perfected some system of signalling whereby they will be apprised of the approach of the submarine and that they don't intend taking any chances of being ordered out to sea by the American neutrality patrol until after their badly wanted prey actually is within sighting distance of the Capes.

A telephone message from Old Point Comfort stated that a number of private launches and yachts were waiting there to escort the Deutschland into Newport News should she show up off that resort. Inasmuch as only Captain Paul Koenig actually knows what the Deutschland really will do, one man's guess was as good as another.

"The tip" was out today to look for the Bremen within the next few days. That she will make an American port—and an unexpected one—is the open declaration made by all German sympathizers here. The majority look for the sister ship of the Deutschland to make some harbor like Portland, Me.

RAID SCARE STARTED BY 8TH

By BERT FORD.

Finlay, Texas, Aug. 2.—Corporal Franklin H. King of Medford, member of C Company of the Eighth Massachusetts Infantry, caused the biggest scare since the Columbus raid when he reported 150 Mexicans mounted and armed, headed through Alzaka Pass for this ranch settlement last evening.

As a result of Corporal King's report the first battalion of the Twenty-third Infantry and two troops of the Eighth Cavalry were rushed from El Paso, seventy miles to Finlay, and when the 650 regulars and their horses and equipment arrived they decided that it was a false alarm.

The reinforcements found Finlay in a state of terror. All the women and children of the settlement, numbering ten Americans and fifty Mexicans, were huddled in the ranch house of George Kennedy, near the railroad track, where they passed a sleepless night.

The scare, increased by river riders and Texas Rangers and regulars sent from Fort Bliss, caused the guard all night armed to the teeth, but nothing happened.

C Company of the Eight Regiment hails from Cambridge. It has been stationed at Hancock since last Wednesday in border patrol, sixty-five miles from El Paso. Details have been stationed as far as fifty village and Torcer, which is nine miles from here and thirty miles from Fort Hancock.

The detail of sixteen men from the Cambridge company at Torcer was in charge last night of Sergeant Henry F. Smith of Watertown, and Corporal King and Privates Whelpley and Jones formed the extreme end of the Massachusetts patrol.

At 4:30 yesterday afternoon Corporal King and Privates Jones and Whelpley claimed they saw a large body of Mexicans in nondescript uniforms ride into the Alaska pass, eight miles from the boundary, in American territory.

King said they were too far to count them so he had no binoculars, but he and others figured there were 150 of them at least. It took some time for Corporal King to hike in and report to Sergeant Smith, who in turn telegraphed to Captain Cushing at Fort Hancock. Captain Cushing reported to General E. Leroy Sweetser, commander of the Second Massachusetts Brigade, who notified General George Bell, Jr., commander of the El Paso district.

So large a force of bandits and so deep in American territory looked bad. General Bell got busy at once. He received the report at 10:10 and by 11 o'clock he had his forces moving.

Bay State Officers May Be Sent Home

By BERT FORD.

Second Massachusetts Brigade Headquarters, El Paso, Tex., Aug. 2.—Rigid physical examinations to be conducted within a few days on the border by the Federal army are expected to result in the rejection of certain officers of Bay State units. Many enlisted men are also likely to be sent home.

That the physical tests are causing concern in certain sections of the Massachusetts camps was plain today. One commanding officer said:

"The mustering out of the four inspectors of small arms is only the forerunner of a weeding process. About all we have had are physical examinations and now we are to have another. While it may sound strong, it certainly appears as if some of the regular officers are gunning for berths in the militia organizations.

"I doubt if the release of the small arms inspectors is strictly legal under the new army law. It is another instance of economy and putting to the bone. You see the small arms inspectors were provided under the old law and now the Federal authorities don't think they are necessary and intend to save a few dollars by making an officer of the gun company of each regiment do the inspection of small arms.

"But though they may send these small arms inspectors home they are not put out of the service, for they still retain their commissions. The order simply means that the army does not need them on the border and relieves them from service. It is a pity because the men ordered home are among the most capable men in our State.

"It is a pity that we should be handicapped by all this red tape and snarl instead of getting right down to practical work."

The opening gun in the fight to retain the small arms inspectors, or to provide new ones for them on the border, was today fired by Colonel Edward L. Logan of the Ninth Regiment, who wrote a letter to the adjutant-general of the United States army at Washington on behalf of Captain Joseph T. Lawless.

MISSES NAGEL INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 2.—Two daughters of Charles Nagel, secretary of Commerce and Labor under President Taft, had a narrow escape from serious injury in Marion when the touring car in which they were riding with two friends was sideswiped by a larger machine and practically broken in two.

Both young women, who are Summer residents at Marion, received bad bumps and were considerably shaken up and cut by flying glass.

Miss Coolidge, daughter of Charles A. Coolidge, and three friends, including the Misses Nagel, was driving her car out of the private driveway that leads to the Beverly Yacht Club grounds from the East Marion road. Miss Hoyt, another Summer visitor at Marion, was driving another car down the road and did not see Miss Coolidge's car until it was squarely across her path. Before she could apply her brakes, she crashed into the smaller car full speed.

GET QUICK RESULTS IN NORFOLK STREET

A score or more citizens of Norfolk street, Dorchester, on the advice of Frank A. Goodwin, acting chairman of the street commissioner today swarmed into the office of Edward F. Murphy, commissioner of public works, and complained of the inactivity and inefficiency of the department in keeping the street in repair.

"The street is a disgrace to the city," was the substance of their remarks.

James H. Sullivan, division engineer of the highway division, in the absence of Commissioner Murphy, promised not only to fix up the street, but to do it tomorrow.

Providence, Aug. 2.—A bill in equity containing 119 pages and 49 charges of mismanagement against directors of the Atlantic National Bank was filed today in the Federal District Court here against Edward P. Metcalf, who is serving a sentence of five years in the Rhode Island State Prison for misappropriating the funds of the bank. The bank closed its doors on April 12.

The directors charged with being unfaithful to their trust are Orrin E. Jones, David F. Sherwood, W. W. Whipple, John S. Murdock, Edwin O. Chase, John R. Dennis, Percy W. Gardner, Jesse P. Giblin Protests Prisoner's Work; Rebukes Sheriff

Representative Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston happened to see some prisoners from the Charles Street Jail doing work at the Suffolk County courthouse today; so he sought out Sheriff Quinn.

"As a member of the House of Representatives of the State of Massachusetts," he said, "I object to this. It is a mean, contemptible trick, to get convict labor to do this work when you could hire men to do it pay them a salary of $5 a day each. I don't care for any excuses, sir. Good day!"

Then he went over to Police Headquarters and as a member of the House of Representatives of the State of Massachusetts, filed another complaint there with Deputy Superintendent John Kimball, who listened attentively.

Somerville Man Asks Court Stop Boy Ball Players

The boys who play baseball in Somerville in the vicinity of the Glen Street Playground may be affected by the bill in equity filed in the Middlesex Superior Court in East Cambridge today by Nathan H. Reed of Winchester, who says windows of houses he owns are broken by the players.

Reed filed a bill of equity against the city of Somerville, Edward C. Booth, Mary Alice Tufts and Andrew M. Kidder, all of Somerville, who own land in the vicinity of the playground.

The bill contends that the balls are frequently batted against his houses, causing much damage. It also says that the occupants of the houses are greatly annoyed by the noise made by the players.

July Rainfall of 5.67 Inches, But Far From Record

The Weather Man today admitted that the month of July was rainier than normal—but not as rainy as July of last year.

Last year's July was a record-breaker, with tremendous downpours for several days.

Normal rainfall for the month is 3.36 inches. This year it was 5.67 inches, against 8.85 inches last year.

There were seventeen cloudy days, and seven partly cloudy. There were sixteen days with measureable rainfall. The average temperature was 73, as against a normal of 71.3. The lowest was 56, on July 5, and the highest 92, on the 21st.

Second Child in Family Dead of Strange Malady

Mary Howell, one-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Howell, who live in the rear of No. 90 Essex street, Chelsea, died at the Frost Hospital today of a mysterious disease contracted with five others of the family when they were spending a few days in Haverhill. Henry, five, another of the children, died Sunday night.

Health Officer Randall said the disease is some form of intestinal disorder that is contagious to a certain extent.

"MESS SHACKS" FOR SOLDIERS AT BORDER

General Cole was advised today that the government is furnishing floors and screens for the "mess shacks" of the Massachusetts troops on the border. The problems of keeping flies out of the eating tents at camp is one of the toughest that confronts military officers. General Cole said the improved type of mess shacks would add to the comfort and safety of the Bay State boys.

Not a single case of typhoid in the Massachusetts ranks has been reported to the adjutant general.

WINSLOW SEGRETLY WEDS

Samuel Ellsworth Winslow, Jr., a member of the junior class at Harvard and son of Congressman Winslow of Worcester, was quietly married in New York city on July 1 to Miss Edna Burns, a pretty young bookkeeper of the Harvard square section of Cambridge, by City Clerk Scully of New York, it became known today. Mrs. Winslow was a near "war bride." Her husband, who was a member of Battery A, was not acceptable for duty with his company at the border because of an injury occasioned by a horse kick.

While the journey to old Manhattan and the secrecy surrounding the wedding had all the earmarks of a romantic elopement, young Winslow denies that such is the case. He says the marriage was performed in New York for purely personal reasons.

BETS OFFERED ON WILSON; NO TAKERS

By International News Service.

New York, Aug. 2.—According to Edward McGrath, who handles all the big betting commissions on the curb of Wall Street, the betting on the presidency remains just as it had been for a week or more. That is to say, a large amount of money is still offered at odds of 1-2 that Wilson will be elected, while not a dollar of Hughes money is in sight at any price.

In all previous presidential campaigns considerable sums of money on the candidates on both the leading tickets have been offered at this stage of the campaign.

HUGHES WILL MAKE 3 MAINE SPEECHES

New York, Aug. 2.—Charles Evans Hughes, Republican candidate for President, held the usual political conferences today. On Saturday he will leave on his first trip of the campaign. Mr. Hughes will make three speeches in Maine. After his return to New York the candidate will continue his campaigning and will be on the road most of the time until election.

MRS. SAMUEL E. WINSLOW, JR. (Miss Edna Burns of Cambridge), and her husband, son of Congressman Winslow of Worcester.

HELD ON CHARGE OF AUTO FARE FRAUD

Albert E. McLean of Copeland street, Roxbury, was held in $500 bail in Roxbury court today on charges of defrauding Benjamin Harrison of a $9 automobile fare and of defrauding Charles W. Cartwright of a $10 fare, on July 25 and 26.

BASS POINT AUTO GANG ROBBERY

The Nahant and Swampscott police are searching the North Shore today for two auto bandits who are alleged to have bound, gagged and robbed W. T. Taylor of No. 148 Middlesex road, Medford, of money and valuables.

Taylor spent the day yesterday at Bass Point, where he engaged a room at a hotel, according to his story he went for a walk in the afternoon, when he met a girl friend.

While near Lynn an automobile with a New York license plate overtook them, Taylor says, then the chauffeur invited them to get in the car.

A few minutes later, Taylor says, two other men climbed in the car and joined the party. After a ride they returned to his room at Bass Point. Refreshments were ordered.

Taylor says the chauffeur was the first to leave. The others soon followed. When the police were called Taylor told them the men had bound and gagged him and took $40 from him in addition to a gold watch and other valuables.

The police say that when they first saw Taylor he was unable to talk, which he explained was due to the gag that had been thrust in his mouth.

The police found the car belonged to a Summer resident of Swampscott whose home is in New York. They also say they have found the chauffeur and exonerate him of all connection in the matter.

They have found no clew to the two mysterious strangers.

FILES PETITION IN LYMAN CASE

A petition was filed in the Federal Court today by Edward E. Ginsburg, counsel for John L. Lytle of New York, trustee in the case of John Grant Lyman, under arrest for fraudulent stock brokerage operations, asking for the appointment of Referee Bosworth of Springfield to examine witnesses in the Bankruptcy Court in that city in connection with Lyman's case.

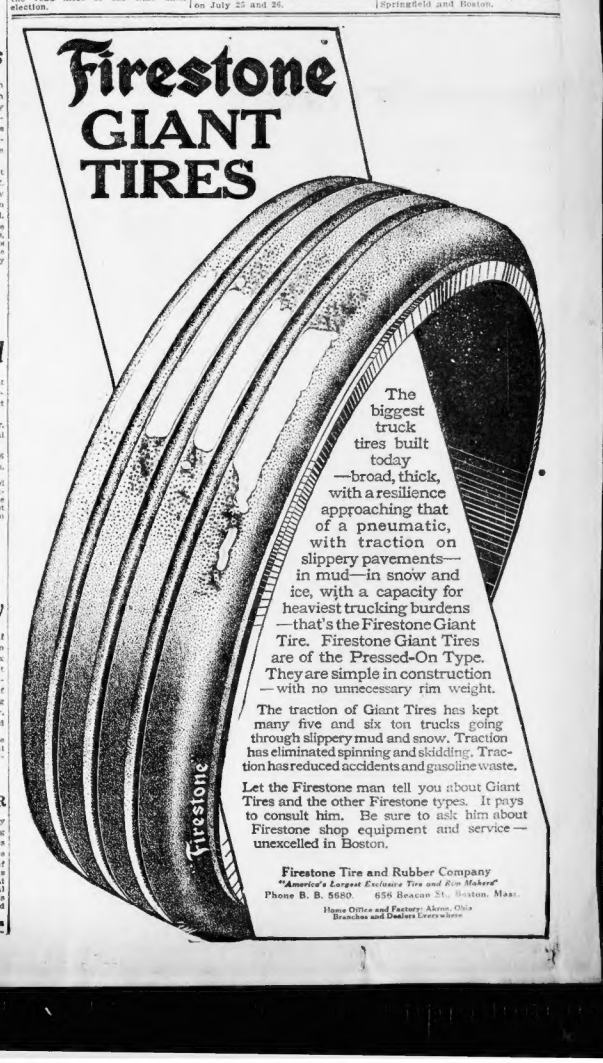

Lyman conducted brokerage houses in all parts of the country, including Springfield and Boston.

'M'CALL WAS MISLED,' DECLARES GOW

what they considered oppression on the part of the board through a secret alliance with leaders of the opposite political party, who had promised as a reward for their assistance the removal of Mr. Woods upon the expiration of his term.

"He further stated that he does not deem the support of this class an essential political asset, and that in any event he would much prefer defeat in defence of clean and honest government than re-election through a dishonest compromise with those who demanded as the price of their political allegiance immunity from the provisions of law and the rules of justice.

WALSH PROMISED AID.

"He also gave me his strongest personal assurances that I could ever rely upon his constant support in my efforts to eliminate politics and favoritism from the board's affairs. He stated as his opinion that it would be a grave political blunder for a public board to give important favors to certain factions in the liquor business; that the sensible men in that business wanted only a square deal and that, in his opinion, they were receiving it from the board as then constituted.

"At this time a very substantial proportion of liquor licensees, brewers, hotel keepers, fourth class dealers and saloon keepers, were definitely with the board in its efforts toward improvement.

"Beyond these, enough to make up a large majority altogether were fast coming into line.

"The irreconcilables were the keepers of some twenty-five low-grade hotels; the proprietors of from fifty to one hundred saloons, which had been disciplined or seriously warned by the board; a few licensees who had been refused certain special privileges in the matter of locations, etc.; and two or three brewing concerns whose trade suffered through the board's regulations.

"Shortly after Governor McCall's election one of his chief political lieutenants sought a meeting with me. In the presence of a witness he stated that there seemed to be much dissatisfaction among the liquor men with Mr. Woods' presence on the board and asked if I did not think it would be desirable for the Governor to replace him.

WOODS UPHELD BY GOW.

"I replied that in my opinion it would not be proper for me, as chairman of the board, to express any opinion on the general question of whether Mr. Woods or someone else should be appointed by Governor McCall, but that I had no hesitancy in advising him or the Governor, if he should ask me, that in my judgment Mr. Woods had made a most excellent and valuable member, not only on behalf of the public but for the better element of liquor dealers as well.

"I was aware at the time that the result of this interview was disappointing to the gentleman referred to, an impression which was confirmed soon after by a report that was brought to me.

"Some time in February of this year I received advices from a friendly source, and later learned through independent channels, that the disgruntled liquor element had been satisfactorily assured of Mr. Woods' removal upon the expiration of his term, and that pressure was then at work from this source, directly or indirectly, to induce Governor McCall to designate the new appointee as chairman of the board, because of a strong conviction among them that in such event I would at once resign and thus make possible a new majority membership in the board.

"Recent events indicate how completely these plans were carried to a successful culmination. Because of my admiration for the excellent political record of Governor McCall I prefer to believe that he was unknowingly a party to the initial stages of the conspiracy. Nevertheless, I cannot escape the conviction that in his action on this appointment he did not rely upon his own investigation and judgment, but placed himself in the hands of men who were deliberately bent upon misleading him and who had cunningly concealed their motives.

EVIDENCE OF DISAPPROVAL.

"It is unfortunate that the Governor saw fit in attempting to justify his action in this matter to ascribe as a reason the complaints of certain temperance interests. It is significant that substantially all the temperance organizations have openly condemned the removal of Mr. Woods. It is equally significant that the Governor never attempted to investigate a single complaint against the board, except by ex parte hearings and that, without once seeking the board's answers to its critics, which answers were available at all times, he saw fit publicly to render a finding adverse to it.

"His action was of no personal consequence to Mr. Woods or myself. The fact that I was deposed as chairman was a mere incident so far as its individual effect upon me was concerned. It was not possible, however, to construe this action of the Governor in any other light than as evidence of his disapproval of the entire policy and effort of the board.

"The question of the board's policy with respect to granting licenses in suburban districts has been used to confuse the public mind in connection with the Governor's action. Had our board been desirous of choosing the 'easiest way' in solving this problem, the 381 licenses which were operating outside of the city proper, when I assumed office, would have been allowed to continue exactly as they were, regardless of the inequity of their geographical distribution.

LICENSE DISTRIBUTION.

"Three of the eight outlying districts of the city were burdened with 75 per cent. of these licenses, while three other sections having substantially the same total population and receiving practically an equal amount from the distribution of the city's liquor income, were required to support but 11 per cent. The remaining 14 per cent. was divided between the East Boston and Brighton districts very nearly in proportion to their per capita quota.

"As a specific illustration of unjust distribution of these licenses, Charlestown, with fifteen times the number of licenses per capita as Dorchester, received but one-third the benefit from the liquor revenue as did the latter community. Yet Dorchester as a district votes in favor of license, although its residents, who have sometimes opposed the board's attitude toward it, have been frank enough to confess that they felt they were voting for license for the other sections of the city and not for their own.

"The members of our board believed that they were sworn to serve the interests of all districts of the city equally and impartially, not to promote the especial welfare of one section at the expense of another.

"Consequently, we saw fit to attempt to relieve in a slight measure the over-burdened communities by transferring a small number of their licenses to the heretofore favored localities under conditions, as to personnel of licensees and type of business, which would render their presence in the new location least objectionable.

"Governor McCall, by his public utterances, has created an impression that he disapproves of the granting of licenses in localities where they are not wanted and has intimated that he will appoint to the board only those who sympathize with this viewpoint.

"The presence of all elements of our population to exert political pressure in order to gain their desired ends was well demonstrated by the efforts of the suburban opponents of the board to prevent by an appeal to Governor McCall, the final issuance of these licenses.

"Although without power to assist them, the Governor did not fail to take political advantage of the opportunity thus afforded to justify his previous action in replacing Mr. Woods and denoting me from the chairmanship.

"Incidentally the attitude of a few suburban churches in this connection leaves the impression that they would willingly destroy all the efforts of the board against the total amount of drunkenness and prostitution in the entire city, if it should add by one to the number of licenses in their section."

Be Careful in Using Soap on Your Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Advertisement.

PLANS INQUIRY ON TROUBLES OF ROOKIES

Congressman Peter F. Tague, who arrived in Washington today, declared it was his intention to start a rigid investigation of charges made by recruits of the Second, Fifth, Eighth and Ninth Regiments to the effect that they have no underclothing to wear or cots on which to sleep.

At the South Station, on his way to Washington, Congressman Tague said:

I have received numerous complaints from young men who enlisted to go to the border. I am told by reliable persons that the recruits who left Camp Whitney several weeks ago for the front found there are no cots available for many of them.

I am also informed that the boys are being used like dogs. It is my intention to inquire into the truth of this assertion. I am also anxious to find out why a censorship is established in Columbus, New Mexico. I want to find out if our boys there are not permitted to make their wants known to the authorities.

Recruits of the Ninth Regiment, in a letter to the Boston AMERICAN, written on the correspondence paper of the Army and Navy branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, say they are at present sleeping on bare ground, that they have no coats, only one change of underclothing, and are not permitted their liberty because they do not appear neat.

Pope Renews Plea for Restoration of Peace While Children Pray

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Rome, July 30, via London, Aug. 2. (Delayed in transmission)—Today's ceremony at the Vatican, during which Pope Benedict XV. asked the children of Rome to pray for the restoration of peace in Europe, recalled the children's receptions given by Pius X. Five thousand children thronged the great hall where the papal throne had been erected. Around the throne sat many cardinals and all the parish priests and nuns.

On his entrance the Pope was escorted by a detachment of noble guards and followed by his whole court and a few privileged guests.

25,000 CHILDREN AT PRAYER.

Cardinal Vicar Pompili in presenting the children said that the Pope's appeal that the young should receive communion had met with a favorable response, nearly 25,000 children having received communion during the morning.

In reply the Pope thanked the cardinals, priests and nuns for their co-operation and then continued:

"Christ's love for children prompted me to order communion and prayers for the ending of the war. Angels are the children's representatives in heaven. I believe God will hear their prayer.

"While your spiritual advisers have already informed you of the reason from our mouth, so that a lasting memory of this moment may remain in your soul—so you will always remember what you heard from us in this tragic speech.

"Learn, children, that for two years men formerly kind and loving have been rending and massacreing each other. Your hearts are naturally made for beautiful spectacles and abhor horrid scenes. You cannot grasp the immensity of slaughter which man is causing men.

WAR DARKEST TRAGEDY.

"Some of you, perhaps, have heard vivid accounts of the conflict from the lips of father, brother or other relative, but luckily the majority of you cannot comprehend the immensity of the appalling catastrophe.

"Be satisfied with the knowledge that you are today unconscious spectators of the darkest tragedy of human hatred and madness. You are witnessing the most terrific expiation which God in His infinite wisdom ever compelled sinning society to inflict on itself with its own hands.

"For two years we, the Father of the Faithful, have suffered, prayed, exhorted; but the exhortation to lay down arms and end the shameful conflagration has been vain.

"You know, children, what we want—we want human society to banish hatred and massacre. After having so heinously been worthy of Cain, we now want society to be worthy of Abel.

"A boy in arms calmed the tempest and saved the ship's crew at the Cape of Good Hope. Why cannot thousands of children move Jesus' heart?"

SEE BRITISH CABINET COLLAPSE

London, Aug. 2.—Politicians of the highest standing declare that there is a general feeling in the House of Commons that the present government is on its last legs, and that the end may come any day.

Shaken tremendously by the Mesopotamian scandal, and subsequently having accepted the directions of the House regarding the composition of the Commission of Inquiry, the government's prestige now has been almost broken by the failure of the Irish settlement.

Except among the extreme section which wrecked the Lloyd-George arrangement, there is general sympathy throughout Parliament for the Irish, who are regarded as victims of a breach of faith, whereas a few weeks ago the press generally supported Premier Asquith in his stand on Ireland, he is attacked by nearly every paper now.

Premier Asquith also seems to have lost his former domination in the Commons in the past few days. His present attitude is almost apologetic.

"Lost his nerve," is the general comment in Parliamentary circles.

An interesting feature of the situation lies in the fact that David Lloyd-George, who is practically certain to become Premier, now is busy conferring with his friends almost daily. Lord Reading and Winston Churchill are his continual visitors, and it is expected that both will return to the Cabinet in the Lloyd-George administration.

"We Will Oust Government," Says Devlin

By JOSEPH DEVLIN, M. P.
Irish Nationalist Leader.
By International News Service.

London, August 2.

WE have declared war on the coalition government and we shall not be satisfied until we get them out.

We now believe that in the more generous atmosphere which has been created it is possible and likely that Catholics and Protestants will unite in finding a solution of the Irish question.

British statesmanship has been proved bankrupt.

Voila! Paris Has New Line on That Deutschland Feat

Special to International News Service and London Telegraph.

Paris, Aug. 2.—According to Havre shipping circles, the voyage of the Deutschland is even a greater bluff than appears. It is believed the submarine never navigated the Atlantic, but was shipped in parts aboard neutral vessels which called at unfrequented ports.

There the parts were put together and when the submarine floated she was laden with aniline dyes and triumphantly sailed for Baltimore within the three-mile limit.

BLIND, MAKES VAIN PLEA TO FREE SON

Blind and unable to walk without assistance, Mrs. Germania Bonjuino of Chelsea street, East Boston, wept in East Boston Court today when her son, Amelia Bonjuino, thirteen, was sentenced to an indefinite term in the Lyman School for Boys. She embraced the boy and pleaded in vain to be allowed to take him home.

Young Bonjuino and Jeremiah Capello, thirteen, of Chelsea street, East Boston, were found guilty of breaking and entering nine grammar schools in the Noddle Island section.

DIPLOMAT TALKS PEACE WITH WILSON

Washington, Aug. 2.—Ira Nelson Morris, United States Minister to Sweden, who is in this country on a vacation, today discussed the possibility of peace in Europe with Presdent Wilson. Mr. Morris declared the United States is looked to by neutrals in Europe as being the power that should lead the way to peace.

LOWELL MAIL CLERK HELD FOR HEARING

Jesse W. Chapman, a clerk in the Lowell postoffice, was held in $500 by United States Commissioner Hayes in the Federal Building today for a hearing on August 9, on the charge of stealing letters from the mails.

DOVER, N. H., MAN IS WOUNDED AT FRONT

Dover, N. H., Aug. 2.—John Harkins of Dover, and now in the British army, has been wounded while fighting in the Picardy drive. He will recover.

MATERIALISM ON BLACKLIST IS CHARGE

London, Aug. 2.—In an editorial on "America and the Blacklist" the Manchester Guardian says that Englishmen should try to understand the point of view of the American government in protesting against the extension of the blacklist to the United States.

The editorial explains that "American objection to these proceedings is two-fold: First, that they do serious injury to American trade and second, that they embody a doctrine in international law which is at once new and pernicious.

"It is the common belief that the first of these grounds—damage to material interests—is the real driving force behind the present protest and similar protests which preceded it."

The Guardian says the American government desires not only to protect here and now its own subjects, but also is anxious to prevent becoming established a theory of international law which it believes to be retrograde and vicious.

WILSON FIRM ON SUFFRAGE VIEWS

Washington, Aug. 2.—Reports that President Wilson is contemplating reversing his position on woman suffrage and coming out in favor of an amendment to the federal constitution giving women the ballot were strongly denied at the White House today. The President's opinion is exactly the same as it has been, it was stated, that being that he favors woman suffrage, but believes that it is a matter for each State to decide for itself. It was emphatically stated that the President would not change his position.

THE BEST THING FOR DYSPEPSIA

WHY PEPSIN, PANCREATIN, ETC., SO FREQUENTLY FAIL.

An international specialist, whose articles on stomach trouble have been printed in nearly every language, recently stated that to treat the average case of stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia, etc., by doctoring the stomach, killing the pain with opiates, or by the use of artificial aids to digestion, such as pepsin and pancreatin, was just as foolish and useless as to attempt to put out a fire by throwing water on the smoke, instead of the fire. He claims, and facts seem to justify his claim, that nearly nine-tenths of all stomach trouble is due to acidity and food fermentation, and that the only way in which to secure permanent relief is to get rid of the cause, i. e., to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation. For this purpose he strongly recommends the plan now generally adopted throughout Europe of taking a teaspoonful of ordinary bisurated magnesia in a little water immediately after eating or whenever pain is felt. This immediately neutralizes the acid, stops the fermentation and permits the stomach to do its work in a normal manner, and thus, by removing the cause, enables nature to quickly restore the inflamed stomach lining to a perfectly healthy, natural condition. For the convenience of travellers it may be noted that most druggists are now able to supply bisurated magnesia in 5-grain tablets, 2 or 3 of which will almost instantly relieve the most violet attacks of indigestion.

THE MOTHER AND DAUGHTER BOTH ARE NOW HAPPY

Mrs. L. B. Clark of 39 Lynde Street Relates Unusual Experience.

The Drug Dept. of the Houghton & Dutton Store, where Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic, is being introduced, has presented a scene of unusual activity for the past few days. Many people are calling out of gratitude to thank the Plant Juice man for what his remedy has done for them. The following statement was made by Mrs. L. B. Clark, who resides at No. 39 Lynde street, who is a prominent church member, a well-known lady, having lived in Boston for 40 years. She stated:

MRS. L. B. CLARK

"I had dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach trouble for years; after eating I would bloat and belch gas and felt a hard lump in the pit of my stomach. I suffered considerable pain, also had pains in my back and shoulders, palpitation of the heart, fluttering, etc. I had that tired out feeling all of the time. I had doctored for my ailments, but did not seem to get any relief. I finally tried Plant Juice, and can now truthfully say that I feel like a new woman. My mother, who is 88 years of age, has also taken Plant Juice, her ailments being about the same as mine, and it has helped her. We have both taken the remedy for two weeks and we are both feeling fine, and are recommending Plant Juice to all of our friends."

The Plant Juice man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

Eben D. Jordan Dies at His Summer Home After Stroke of Paralysis

Merchant Philanthropist Mourned by Thousands Who Admired Achievements.

Eben D. Jordan's death was today mourned by thousands of people who esteemed him for his achievements and who regarded him with affection for his devotion to art, music, philanthropies and good works.

The great head of Jordan Marsh Company died at his Summer home, "The Rocks," West Manchester. Death resulted from a stroke of paralysis.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon at Trinity Church, which Mr. Jordan suffered July 22.

The man who has endeared himself to so many thousands of people fought stoutly against his illness. At first the physicians who attended him believed he would recover. His condition, however, became worse a few days ago. Medical aid was unable to turn the tide of battle in his favor, and the great merchant, patron of art and music, and philanthropist passed into the great beyond.

In the death of Mr. Jordan the business world has suffered a tremendous loss. The arts and humanity have lost a true and liberal friend.

Besides his widow Mr. Jordan is survived by a son, Robert, and a daughter, Dorothy. The latter was recently married to Munroe Robinson of New York.

Mr. Jordan was a most capable, earnest business man. He was far-seeing in his business enterprises, and his affairs, backed by an expert knowledge of conditions, scored remarkable successes.

As a boy Mr. Jordan refused to take an executive position when he first went to work in the great store established by the elder Jordan and B. L. Marsh. He started at the bottom of the ladder of business, and after careful study and hard, conscientious work gradually worked his way to the top rung.

Art and music lovers owe much to Mr. Jordan. He built the Boston Opera House at a cost of $1,000,000, and he made many important contributions to the New England Conservatory of Music, being prominent in the affairs of that organization until its commencement exercises last June.

As a horse enthusiast, Mr. Jordan for many years had one of the best stables of hackney horses in the world. He had a mammoth horse-breeding farm from which came some of America's greatest mounts. He experimented in an effort to determine what animal was most suited for the American carriage horse.

The story of Mr. Jordan's life reads like a fairy tale. It is a case of one remarkable business triumph following another, and with countless cases of where he has aided some good cause with the money which his ability had won from the business world.

Mr. Jordan made much money, but he took greater pleasure in expending part of his vast wealth than he did in accumulating it. To him the greatest joy was in giving and trying to make the world brighter and better.

INTEREST IN SPORTS.

Although his business interests required much of his time, Mr. Jordan nevertheless found enough time in which to secure healthy recreation. He was an enthusiastic horseman, an ardent golfer and expert fisherman.

He took great pleasure in these three sports because they kept him out in the open a great deal.

When Mr. Jordan entered any of his famous horses in a big show, he was usually among those who witnessed the event. He delighted discussing the merits of the horses entered in the event and was always delighted when one of his horses won a blue ribbon.

His riding horses were among the best in the country. It was a common sight to see him driving a pair of thoroughbreds at one of his country homes, or in the suburbs of Boston.

Mr. Jordan spent much of his time at one of his Summer homes, "The Forges," at Plymouth. He built "The Forges" in 1900, but since that time has bought other Summer places.

It was while living at Plymouth that Mr. Jordan presented that place with a beautiful modern hospital. He was eager that the sick and aged have a haven of refuge.

MEMBER OF MANY CLUBS.

Mr. Jordan was a member of several clubs, but he never took a prominent part in club life. His name appeared on the books of the Algonquin, Puritan, Exchange, Country, Eastern Yacht, Essex Country and Wollaston Golf and Santee clubs.

His father, founder of the famous department store, bore the same name, and came to Boston a poor boy. The industry and ability of the elder Jordan made the venture upon which he entered in 1851, with B. L. Marsh, successful.

TROUBLED WITH POOR EYES.

Eben D. Jordan was born in Boston, November 7, 1847. A worthy son of a worthy sire," as he has often been called. After receiving his elementary education in the local schools he entered Adams Academy, Quincy, from which he was graduated in 1876, and prepared for Harvard.

For a short while previous to his entering Harvard in the class of 1880, of which former President Roosevelt was a member, he traveled in Europe, continuing his studies with a tutor. During his course in college trouble with his eyes manifested itself for a second time and he was obliged to give up his studies. After this disappointment young Jordan took a sea voyage to California, acting on the advice of an oculist, and was materially benefited.

When he returned home he announced his intention of entering a mercantile life. He took a humble position in his father's store, packing, unpacking and shipping goods, doing a "jumper's" work, shirking nothing and asking favors of no one.

Every detail of the vast business of the house he became familiar with. He accepted his promotions from one department to another with enthusiasm and interest.

Soon after his promotion to the retail department, his artistic taste, his keen eye for the beautiful, and his excellent judgment were noticed, and he was sent to Europe as a buyer. For a period of six years he made two trips a year across the Atlantic, visiting the markets of Paris, Berlin, London and Vienna for the house of Jordan, Marsh & Co.

ENTERED GREAT FIRM.

In 1869, at the age of twenty-three years, Mr. Jordan became a partner in the firm.

Following the death of his father Mr. Jordan became president of the corporation. As president Mr. Jordan guided the growth of the big store, directed the election of the big annex and kept a sharp watch on all departments.

He strongly enforced the rule laid down by his father that "Jordan's" must be always known for honest goods and honest dealings.

It was a source of pride to him that Jordan's, while famous as one of the biggest of America's department stores, was also known as a reliable store which kept faith with its thousands of customers.

Two handsome monuments to Mr. Jordan's great interest in the artistic life of Boston stand out on Huntington avenue—one the Boston Opera House, and the other the New England Conservatory of Music.

Mr. Jordan's activity and generosity in connection with the conservatory, some twenty years ago, secured its home on Huntington avenue, and Jordan Hall, which is the students' recital hall and the scene of many notable musical events every year, was his direct contribution to the school, whose equipment stands second to none in the country.

BUILD BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

Mr. Jordan built the Boston Opera House in 1909 at a cost of $1,000,000 for the purpose of establishing opera in Boston on a permanent basis, and, to complete his liberality, he founded the Boston Opera Company and became chairman of its board of directors. This position he held until the company went out of existence a year ago last Winter—an event brought about mainly through the European war.

With the assistance of Mr. Jordan, the Boston Opera Company was organized by Henry Russell.

A few years ago Mr. Jordan was invited to join the directorate of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, but his enthusiasm, so far as musical affairs were concerned, still centered itself in the Boston Opera House and the New England Conservatory.

It was also due to Mr. Jordan's magnificent interest in musical life, and especially opera, that the Boston Opera Company ventured upon its brilliant season in Paris two years ago.

A tribute to Mr. Jordan's generosity in giving the use of the opera house in 1913 with his selection as an honorary director of the Royal Opera, Convent Garden, London.

Mr. Jordan sold the Boston Opera House in February of this year. He was the principal creditor when the opera company failed in May, 1915.

Mr. Jordan gave $50,000 to the New England Conservatory of Music for an organ, and another $50,000 for the building fund.

AIDED THE GRADUATES.

One of the largest of his gifts to the conservatory was that of a lot of land, valued at $51,200. Not only did he assist in the financing of the institution, but Mr. Jordan also assisted graduates of the conservatory in their musical careers. The receptions given by Mr. and Mrs. Jordan to the graduating classes were the most brilliant social events of the student year.

In the selection of pictures he showed the rare taste and superior judgment that characterized the artist man. In his private collection at his beautiful home are examples by Gainsborough, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Thomas Lawrence, Robert Hunter, Trumbull, Diaz, Decamp, Couture, Leloir and many other painters of note.

He was also interested in horses. One of his greatest victories was that in the Boston Horse Show in 1904, when he took thirty firsts, against four for Thomas W. Lawson, and eight for E. T. Stotesbury, his rivals in that exhibition. His Hildreth, a several times Winner, was fresh from victory at the Madison Square Garden, where a championship was awarded her. His "Gentle Annie," "Hurrah," and "The Baron" were also consistent winners for several seasons.

A serious fire loss was that of $30,000 in 1903, when his riding school and stock stable at "The Forges," in Plymouth, were destroyed.

After the death of his mother in 1898 Mr. Jordan removed to his home at "Stonehurst," Corey Hill, Brookline, having purchased the house on Beacon street where he had since resided. He married Miss May Sheppard of Philadelphia, March 22, 1883.

WENT TO SCOTLAND.

"The Forges," the former Jordan country home in Plymouth, has been one of the show spots of the South Shore. In 1905 Mr. Jordan leased Inverary Castle at Argyleshire, Scotland.

The family spent the Summer of that year in the historic 500-year-old castle and then six months later, they leased for several months Drummond Castle, Perthshire, one of the most famous of the larger Scotch country estates.

The historic Inverary Castle is one of the most interesting structures in the United Kingdom. The picture gallery of the castle is one of the finest in Scotland. There may be seen works of art from brushes of all the great artists, both ancient and modern.

Drummond Castle is perhaps even more famous. It stands on a rocky eminence about three miles from Crieff, and commands a fine view of the Strathearn. It was purchased in 1487 by John Drummond, and was often visited by Mary, Queen of Scots, and Darnley. It suffered at the hands of Cromwell in the seventeenth century. Mr. Jordan also had Glenroe Castle for a season.

MENTIONED FOR MAYOR.

Mr. Jordan, although deeply interested in all movements and organizations for civic betterment, never ran for public office. He was, however, strongly urged to become a Mayoralty candidate in 1909 on the Republican ticket.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

Itched and Burned. Badly Disfigured. Healed by Cuticura.

"I had pimples on my face for about nine months and it used all kinds of waters, but they made my skin all irritated. My face was covered with pimples which were red and hard and scaled over or came to a head. They itched and burned causing my face to be irritated by scratching them and I was badly disfigured.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and afterward bought more, and when I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment the pimples all dried leaving my skin clear and I was healed." (Signed) Eugene Dusablon, 38 Emerson St., Woonsocket, R. I., Feb. 27, 1916.

How happy we should all feel if Cuticura Soap and Ointment might be used today by every one afflicted with painful and disfiguring pimples. There is no reason why every one should not do so. It may be purchased in every town and village in the United States, or free sample by mail may be had for the asking. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston." Sold everywhere.

Seven are still missing, and it is believed by the New Jersey authorities that the final death list will be 13. The body of Cornelius J. Leyden of the Lehigh Valley Railway police was found yesterday and was identified today. Four men have been arrested and held in $5,000 bail each. The railroads have agreed to ship no more explosives for the time being into Jersey City.

Braves Out to Win Tyler After the Cards

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

This afternoon at 3:15 Miller Huggins leads his Cardinal band into the final game of this visit to Boston. For one hour prior to that time B. M. Hapgood's regular band concert will occupy the attention of the fans. This morning a strong impression prevailed that in this final contest Manager Stallings would rely on either George Tyler or Tom Hughes to do the chucking.

AMES OR JASPER.

For St. Louis either Leon Ames or Jasper will work in all probability. Inasmuch as Tragesser isn't yet in condition to work, Manager Stallings is forced to use Arthur Rico back of the bat again. On that account it would seem as though Hughes might have the call. That is because of the difficulty even an experienced receiver finds in handling the delivery of George Tyler. However, Tyler is ready, and it may be that Stallings will take a chance with him.

By winning yesterday the Braves have the edge on the Cards most decisively, but to make it even more so Stallings is out to land today's game. He hasn't been at all pleased with some of the happenings when his club has clashed with San Luis in the past, and consequently wants to win every possible start. The chief thinks that a possibility if the bunch only continues hitting the ball and getting on the bases.

MAGEE LOOKS GOOD.

The fact that Sherwood Magee showed a flash or two of his old-time form in yesterday's game made the Miracle Man an exceedingly happy individual today. With hitters like Magee and Konetchy kicking in with a blow now and then, not to speak of Red Smith's coming through at opportune moments, much good can come to the club. The other men are getting on often enough to make run getting a possibility.

When the Cards leave here tonight they hike on to Philadelphia for a series. This season they have been fairly successful against the Fat-mornas, and hope to be able to continue so during this visit. And at the same time the Pirates are in Brooklyn. Despite the generally poor showing of Jimmy Callahan's club, they go well when battling the Robins, and if by chance they win a game or two, some good should come Boston's way.

AFTER THE REDS.

Meanwhile the Braves have a score or two to settle with Cincinnati. During the Boston club's last visit to Redland they were handed white gloves; that, however, happened prior to the advent of Christy Mathewson as manager. Stallings desires to even matters up regardless of who the Red manager may be. He and the Braves, too, have lots of regard for Matty but they have more for games won.

"We are rather hard hit for catchers now," said Stallings this morning," but I think we'll be able to get by. I think the boys can land this afternoon's game from the Cards and then for the Reds. They weren't very charitable to us on our last visit to their home grounds. Rest assured we won't be a bit more charitable to them now.

BOLSTER THE CATCHING.

"Our catching department won't be in a crippled condition for so very long. Tragesser will be in shape in a day or so now and Gowdy will round to rapidly. Meanwhile young Rico is going good and we are still trying to recall Blackburn. It never rains but it pours for us, and possibly now it may start raining some luck. We can stand to win a lot of ball games, and if I can make it a possibility you can bet it will be."

With these few words the Chief went down onto the playing field to instruct some of his athletes in the gentle art of hitting. He is paying special attention to Rico, as is Fred Mitchell, and when that pair gets through with the lad he should have a fair working knowledge of backstopping as well as hitting. Rico has a good arm and throws well. He'll be a polished catcher by the time Gowdy gets back in service.

BRAVES NOTES

"JOY," the little character made famous by Cartoonist Tom Powers in the AMERICAN, flested over Braves Field after the game. Let's hope gloom never gets a chance to fly.

* * *

MILLER HUGGINS and his Cardinal bunch conclude their second visit of the season this afternoon. To prevent them annexing another game, Stallings has George Tyler and Tom Hughes in condition.

* * *

WALTER TRAGHESSOR spent Monday and Tuesday nights in a Back Bay hospital, having hot applications put on his injured leg. He was able to leave today, but it's doubtful if he attempts playing for several days.

* * *

A THUSAND or more youths from Brighton and Allston were in the left field stands as guests of the club and Representative Fred Dowling, a former newspaper man. They shouted continuously and spent much time running up and down the concrete steps in the stand. One grandstand wag was prompted to remark they were training to be ball boys.

* * *

"STONEWALL" JACKSON is still doing business with his petition. It was thought that the departure of Mal anad Al would stop Jackson. It didn't, however, for he's now on Rigler and Harrison. Signatures didn't come very fast yesterday, though both Rigler and Harrison called to "stonewall" they were willing to sign up.

* * *

BILL JAMES was elected for the day lanching stunt by Rigler. Rigler called a close one on Rudolph at first, while Bill was coaching, and as a result of his remarks anent vision, he was sent to the showers.

* * *

S. MAGEE appeared at the park yesterday attired in his Miami duds, white flannel trousers and white felt hat. They came the gift of a hat from "Rabbit" Maranville. Combining these two together it looks like luck, for Magee proceeded to hit three of them safe and contributed several swell catches. Two of them were the equal of any made in Boston.

* * *

BOTH Rudolph and Meadows had a fine time fielding during the game. Each had nine chances, the Boston hurler contributing some swell stops and throws that were of necessity fast.

* * *

HANK GOWDY saw the game from President Haughton's box. Hank made his appearance with his right hand encased in a clean white sling. Hennery pulled hard for Boston to land.

The White Sox got a little nearer to the lead when they twice walloped the Athletics.

PADDY BURNS will meet Joe Mahoney in the main event at Brown's Far Rockaway A. A. Friday night.

AT the Harlem Sporting Club Friday Monte Attell is scheduled to meet Buddy Faulkes, the colored bantam.

Worcester Keeps Coaching Staff Intact

Worcester, Aug. 2.—Worcester Academy coaching staff will be kept intact for the coming school year, J. Fred Powers, who was sought by Harvard to take charge of the Crimson field men and work in conjunction with "Pooch" Donovan, will return to coach the track team, while C. N. Measer will be back as athletic director and coach of the football and baseball team, pairing up with S. C. Hasleton in the varsity branches.

Foster to Pitch Today Champs Keep Moving

Detroit, Aug. 2.—Manager Carrigan has his World's Champions in first place by an eyelash. He realizes that the boys must keep going with the White Sox so close up so that the game today is sure to prove a scrappy one. Anyone who does not figure the White Sox as having a chance for the flag has forgotten that the Chicago club has quite a few games to play with the Athletics, who are the meal ticket of the league. The Boston players realize this and are set to get going fast enough to overcome that advantage. Foster will probably pitch today, while Dubuc is likely to be the Detroit choice.

Yesterday's score was 6-2 and the triumph was a mixture of timely hitting, bounteous luck and excellent pitching—a combination which the Red Sox are very fond of mixing to their advantage.

The game started with a rush. Hooper tripled to centre on the second ball pitched and scored on Bush's error off Barry. Lewis hit into a double play, but that didn't stop the action, as Hoblitzel, Walker and Gardner all singled in quick succession, and another tally came home.

JAMES FAILS TO REPEAT.

From that time until the seventh, James, who won his game from the Red Sox on Saturday, allowed only one hit, and was never again in trouble until the eighth.

Meanwhile, the Tygers started to whittle down the Boston lead. An error by Cady on James, an infield play and a long single by Burns gave them a counter in the third. In the sixth "Tillie" Walker made a two-base muff of Veach's fly after a hard run, and Crawford rammed Bobby around to third with a single to left, from whence he scored on a force play at second.

The blow-off came in the eighth, and the old Boston knack of disturbing the peace whenever given an opening asserted itself. Hooper led off with a high bounder to Burns and reached the bag in safety. Then James hit Barry in the back with the ball. Lewis promptly sacrificed and the fun started.

HOBBY STARTS FIREWORKS.

Hoblitzel hoisted a short fly Crawford could not quite reach, but kicked on the first hop, and it went for a double. Hooper scored, but Barry didn't start soon enough and was held at third. Walker rolled to Bush and Barry was out at the plate. Gardner singled to right and Hoblitzel tallied.

Scott tapped to James, who decided to get fancy. He tossed the ball to Burns, instead of shooting it, and Burns let it drop. Walker scored on the misplay.

Then Scott and Gardner tried a double steal and got away with it when Young, usually a very brainy player, lost his head and threw to the plate, after he had Scott blocked off for the third out by a rod.

CADY TRIPLES—WHOOPLA!

That took the heart out of the Tygers and they didn't get a smell thereafter. In the seventh Cady tripled with two out and Ruth went up for Shore. A wonderful one-hand dive for a line foul by Bush put him in the sepulchre.

Enrty made the same sort of catch off Burns in the first inning. Leonard finished for Shore, and was very effective.

Pitcher Caldwell Breaks Training and Is Sent Home

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 2.—Because of his failure to keep in condition and obey the rules of the club, Pitcher Ray Caldwell has been suspended for fifteen days without pay and fined $100 by Manager Bill Donovan of the Yankees.

After imposing the fine and suspension, Donovan notified Caldwell to leave for New York. His poor work on the mound this season has been a big disappointment to Donovan.

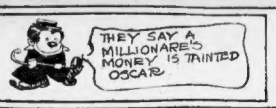

Caldwell is said to have broken training after he lost a game to the Browns here last Saturday.

COAST STAR FOR TYGERS.

San Francisco, Aug. 2.—Johnny Couch, the former Stanford University pitcher, with the San Francisco (Pacific Coast League) team, was sold to Detroit today. He will join the Tygers next Spring.

O'Leary Gets Decision

Hammer Makes a Hit

By RINGSIDE.

Viewed from every angle the Johnny O'Leary-Ever Hammer game of flaticuffs, staged at the Arena last night, was the smartest of successes. Referee Larry Conley declared O'Leary the winner when the busy, bristling twelve-round encounter was over. It was the sort of a battle that practically as great honors went to the loser as the victor.

Suffice it to say that Conley, an efficient official, a referee game enough to nominate as the winner the boy he considered in front at the final bell, figured, and rightly so, too, that the more experienced O'Leary had a shade in his favor. Hence, the doughty Seattle, Wash., lightweight, owner of Canada's championship in the 135-pound division, was proclaimed the winner.

Conley's decision proved satisfactory to the bulk of the fans, though truth it is that there were dozens of good sport patrons who thought Hammer was entitled to a draw verdict. The "whirling Dervish" from Chicago made the hit of his

A mere stripping of a youth, hardly of age, taking part in his twenty-first ring battle and showing for the first time east of his home city, also for the first time beyond the ten-round route, and the first time a decision hung in the balance, Hammer proved conclusively, though shaded by O'Leary, another high type of glovesman, a bright, unmistakable star, he is no flash-in-the-pan and is destined to create a mighty big fuss in the Queensberry world before he gets through.

BOTH BATTLERS DELIVER.

As for O'Leary, he, too, is classy. He's been a regular winner in the Buffalo and Rochester rings of late months; in fact, he devoured Jimmy Duffy and Shamus O'Brien among other good boys. He is class, an undisputed topliner, and probably put up the best battle of his career last night. For some reason or other the usually extremely wise Boston talent had Hammer doped too high. They seemed to lose sight of the fact the little gamecock was fighting his first battle away from home; was working for the first time with a referee's verdict hanging in the balance.

Then, take it from Hammer and his clever manager, Howard Carr, that the weather was somewhat hot in Chicago last week, and that the little battler was practically "all in" when he reached Boston Sunday after their harsh ride east. Fighter or manager are not around today making any alibis. On the contrary, both paid their respects to O'Leary; stated they wanted some additional dates from the Armory A. A. management, and Conley will run for them as referee every time.

WHALE OF A BOUT.

It was a whale of a battle; the best put up in Boston all season. In reality it is probably one of the best ever staged here, or any place else for that matter. After last week's miserable stalling match between Jack Britton and Johnny Griffiths, two boys who have heretofore been rated higher up on the dope calendar than O'Leary and Hammer, the putting up of such a hurricane battle as O'Leary and Hammer rendered last night had the faithful in attendance shaking hands with themselves, before even the first round was on, for taking one more chance with the Arena bookings.

SPORT FOOD

FOILED AGAIN.

I dreamed a most wonderful dream last night,
For I dreamed I had crossed the Styx.
Where Satan is keeping his flames alight
For a number of lucky kicks.

"Let me in," I remarked to an imp at the gate,
My demeanor was peevish and cross,
But the imp only told me to stand there and wait
Till he took up my case with the boss.

When Satan arrived he remarked with a snort,
And a voice that was freezing and stern:
"There ain't no more room in this Summer resort;
Go back to old Boston and burn.

After a test of several years we come to the conclusion that Boston is a great Summer resort in Spring, Autumn and Winter.

WANT AD.

LOST, STRAYED OR STOLEN—One cool breeze.

Various hyphenated Americans tell us that they don't believe anything they read in the newspapers. Yesterday they read that the weather was hot, but none of them suffered from chilblains.

Lee Meadows tells us that specs are not necessarily a detriment to a pitcher. On the opposite hand, most pitchers will tell you that most umpires need them.

Jack McCarey, or "Mac," as the boys call him, is passing out the cigars, buying the ice cream and telling what a hard time he has to keep his latest, ten-eleven-pound boy) from jumping on the electrics over Bunker Hill way. Some boy—a chip of the old block.

JONAH SEEMS TO BE AN INTELLIGENT CHAP.

Dear Sir: Having read your column for the last few days, I have come to the conclusion that you are under the impression that the weather is warm.

Not that we mean to be inquisitive or anything like that, but how would you like to be one of the polar bears in Franklin Park?

YEARNING.

A cake of ice upon my head,
Another cake to cool my feet,
A nice young iceberg for my bed
And life would then be calm and sweet.

To whom it may concern: I am going home and flop into a cool bath tub, in spite of the fact it isn't Saturday night. I wouldn't have the heart to ask a Ford to work on a day like this.

Carman Defends Cycling Prize at Revere

TONIGHT'S REVERE CARD.

"Mile-a-Minute" Carman, the sensational Long Island rider, defends the prized Brassard at the Revere cycle track tonight in a one-hour motor-paced race against Leon Didier, Victor Linart and Bobby Walthour, three brilliant foes. This will be the fourth contest of its kind this season.

In addition to the Brassard and the usual card of amateur and professional events, there will be a struggle for the New England professional sprint championship with every pro at the beach entered. A handsome medal, donated by Manager Nat Butler, will be awarded the winner.

Chief among the favorites are Tim Sullivan, Fred Herbert, Ned Chandler, Pat Logan, Paul Suter, the Rollins brothers, the Connolly brothers, "Pinkie" Turville and Saxon Williams.

Linart Hurls a Defi at Rivals on Revere Oval

"I will bet $50 I can defeat any pace follower at the Revere cycle track if they allow me one concession," declared Victor Linart, the Belgian star, today.

"This concession is my choice of pacemaker and that man will be Merin. This challenge goes and I am ready to post the money any time an opponent answers."

"Yes," interrupted a friend of Linart's, "and I am ready to add $200 more Linart can do as he says."

BOWL TO GO WEST AGAIN

William M. Johnston of San Francisco Proves Too Formidable for Armstrong in Longwood Finals.

William M. Johnston of San Francisco decisively demonstrated to a large gallery of tennis fans at Longwood just why he holds the national singles title.

In winning the final match for the Longwood Bowl from J. J. Armstrong of Philadelphia, Johnston displayed about as fine an assortment of tennis as a Longwood gallery has ever been privileged to look upon, which is saying a whole lot.

While it is true that it took him four sets to win from the young Philadelphian, there were many who held the opinion the Champion eased up so that he might have a fifteen-minute rest and thus get a helpful rubdown. When one considers that during the semi-final match with Washburn Monday Johnston lost seven pounds, he can readily understand the Champion had a perfect right to conserve his energy.

JOHNSTON AT HIS BEST.

In the first two sets he played the fastest tennis that has been seen during the entire twenty-six years of the tournament. Overhead his game was equally as good as it was off the ground.

Johnston's speed and ability was a revelation. Not a few among those who lined all sides of the court declared that Johnston had never shown to such perfect advantage as did his young successor to Longwood champion honors.

By some he was referred to as "The Streak," and such a title was well earned. Johnston darted to the net and back with cattish speed. He went from one side to the other in a most amazing manner, in fact, dazzled all who looked on with his great speed.

They wondered how a player who appeared so slight could stand the terrific strain of so severe a series of matches as Johnston has just gone through.

It appeared to many as if Johnston figured he had Armstrong beaten almost any time he wanted to end it, and, consequently, eased off during the third set. He had time between the third and fourth to have a shower bath and rubdown. Armstrong won the set mainly on Johnston's errors.

SCORES ALMOST AT WILL.

Looking greatly refreshed the young champion returned to the court for the fourth set, and, 'ere Armstrong realized it, had run up a lead of six games to love.

Once more he eased off, and gave the Philadelphian a chance to spurt. Two games were his total. To combat Johnston's all around game Armstrong had but two strokes, a heck hand chop and an overhead cut.

Once or twice he smashed a trip to the net, and on such occasions he was easily passed. Johnston himself went to the net quite often, and by so doing scored telling points. His final win was an immensely popular one to the gallery, for since first he came East to play he has been a great Longwood favorite.

HUMAN nature is so constituted that it has generally to bear the one thing it always protests it cannot endure—that is suspense.

Poor Mary Ryan suffered tortures as she vacillated between hope and despair while we waited for some word from Jimmy Barton, reporter and amateur sleuth.

Her mother prepared some lunch for us and I helped my new friends wash the dishes. Then Mary and I cut a shirtwaist out of some material she had in the house, and presently we had it fitted and basted. But even her normal woman's interest in clothes could not long divert the poor girl's mind from thoughts of her lover.

All sorts of terrifying visions flitted across her imagination in pictures so vivid as to seem real. At one moment she cried aloud that George was dead, and at the next she insisted that he was infatuated with the girl of the restaurant and that she had lost him to her rival. But in the end her faith triumphed and Mary decided that if he were still living he was true to her—that when the mystery was cleared up George would prove to be the victim of some cruel plot.

"Oh, if he's only alive, Miss Fairfax—that's all I ask, just for him to be alive and well."

Hours passed and there was no word from Jimmy. I realized that Mary's strained and tortured nerves could no longer endure inaction. The only thing for us to do was to get out in the fresh air and walk over to the street on which she had met her lover and the mysterious young woman whose part in her life was so puzzling.

Coincidence is very often kind. We wandered up and down for almost half an hour, and just when Mary was beginning to yield to utter despair a young woman came around the corner and hurried on ahead of us, with a bold and swaggering walk and manner which at once attracted my attention to her. A second later Mary touched my arm desperately. I was not at all surprised when she whispered, "That's the girl—the very girl!"

We hurried after the girl and watched her vanish through a door at our left.

"We must go, too," cried Mary. I knew that to follow her on our insufficient evidence was sheer bravado, but who can refuse tortured desperation when it visions one chance in a thousand of finding relief.

A Doctor's Apartment

The girl we were following had entered an apartment on the first floor of the dark and gloomy building. On the door there was a little brass sign prieded out in black letters. It read, "Dr. Schulze." There seemed no particular folly in entering a doctor's office. Mary walked unhesitatingly over to the door and turned the knob. It yielded. We entered a room which carried out the promise of the sign on the door. It was distinctly a doctor's office of the type one finds in poor neighborhoods. There were charts and diagrams on the walls, and the table was covered with magazines. A great many shabby chairs stood about the room, and the air was impregnated with heavy, stale odor of iodoform and other medicines.

Later I had a hard time excusing myself for the sheer sympathetic folly which made me permit Mary to lead when she was so badly in need of a leader. We should have found a policeman before we entered into what might prove a lion's den as well as a doctor's office.

Mary had dropped on her knees and was peering through a keyhole which gave a view of the room into which we supposed the girl we were following had gone.

"Miss Fairfax, that girl's in there and they've got a whole suitcase full of money. Do you suppose"——she began, and then she interrupted herself suddenly and cried aloud with real joy vibrating through her tones, "George! George! Oh, I'm so glad I've found you."

I turned and faced the young man to whom she was speaking. For a second his expression was one of blank unrecognition. Then he laughed coldly and with cruelty which did not attempt to disguise itself.

Mary Is Caught

A second later the door of the inner room burst open and in a quick panorama I saw the mysterious girl close the money-filled suitcase and realized that one of the biggest, most brutal looking men I had ever seen was fairly leaping into the room where Mary and I had so foolishly ventured.

He was followed by a man I knew at once must be the "Dr. Schulze" of the sign on the door. There was a levelled gun in the doctor's hands. I caught Mary's wrist and rushed with her to the outer door. But the other girl stood there smiling so unpleasantly that it produced the effect of a snarl.

Mary Ryan's letter had brought me into strange company!

The big man caught Mary in his strong arms and dragged her into the inner room. A moment later the doctor and the man who looked like Mary's missing sweetheart had overpowered me. They bound us tightly with strong ropes which held our bodies manacled to chairs and quite helpless. I had a feeling that I was trussed up like a Christmas turkey, and in the midst of my hideous surprise I had a queer desire to laugh at the absurd figure I knew I was cutting.

In a situation like that one always has a strange feeling of unreality. I kept telling myself that this absurd melodrama couldn't be true—that I, Beatrice Fairfax, could not be taking part in this ridiculous scene, so like those depicted in the "ten, twenty, thirties" of my youth. I expected to awaken at any minute and find myself at my desk in the Journal office.

A Menacing Figure

But a moment later the grim reality of the situation forced itself on me. In a coarse, husky voice, without trace of culture or emotion, the man who looked like Mary's sweetheart was speaking. "They're after us at the other place, too. We got to get out of town."

The "Doctor" nodded emphatically. The other two men and the girl seemed to be absolutely under orders from him. He gave his commands in a series of signs, which he jerked out roughly and which they obeyed without protest. The big man lifted the suitcase full of money and followed the pseudo watchman from the room. Then the "Doctor" turned and looked at us with a queer, slow malice which struck terror to my heart.

That look conveyed the unmistakable information that he hadn't quite finished with us—that people who blocked the game he was playing generally found him an opponent to be reckoned with.

He measured us coldly for a minute. I wanted to shriek out that I was Beatrice Fairfax of the Journal, and that my paper would avenge me—but I was not quite sure that it would be wise to reveal my identity to the sinister creature who stood appraising us so coldly.

I wondered where Jimmy was—what the end of this whole absurd business was going to be—whether poor Mrs. Ryan was worried about her daughter, and, above all, what had become of George McCabe.

A second later wonder gave way to dizzying horror. The "Doctor" walked over to his medicine chest and took out a jar and a glass retort. He poured some dark crystals from the jar into the retort and then moistened the crystals with a glass of water. At once a dense cloud of white vapor arose.

Blinded by Fume

I saw through it a face leering at me with almost satanic fury. Then the "Doctor" covered his mouth and nose with his hand and plunged out of the room and away from the strangling fumes that were filling my lungs with a choking vapor and blinding my smarting eyes.

Tense and expectant, I sat in the deadly miasma that was bearing down upon me with a force that choked at my throat and tortured my heart into heavy-flooding beats. I had set out to help Mary Ryan, but I was impotent even to reach out a comforting hand to the girl who was hidden from me somewhere in the poisonous white mists that swirled about us.

"Mary!" I called. "Mary!"

There was no answer. Was she mercifully unconscious and unterrified by the doom that menaced us both? I wondered if we would simply strangle slowly to death or if a sudden explosion from those unknown crystals would presently rend the air?

The Biography of a Sinner

By ANN LISLE

Copyright, 1916, International News Service.

In the Millvale hospital Mildred Francis lay struggling through the long, weary days of grim and sultry heat. I could not bring myself to go to see her. I could not even ask Rex if he were seeing her.

It was October before they dared bring Mildred home—a little white shadow of the girl she had once been. When at last I could force myself to go to see her the deepest pity I have ever known clutched at my heart. Mildred's eyes were haunted—haunted and afraid.

She could tell me the dreadful story of that night — and then I knew why her eyes had that look of awful pain. Her little weak voice jerked it out sentence by sentence, and sobs broke through and shook her.

"Oh, Vera, I sometimes hope I'll never walk again—I don't deserve to. It's all my fault that Len's gone. And now he's dead I feel as if I had cared more for him than for anyone else."

"Yes, dear, I understand," I said and I thought, I did—we were both too young to guess that what she felt was remorse and hysteria, not love. Rex paid toll for our ignorance with more than life—but that was later.

"The drive down was all right, Vera. We had a wonderful time, and Len was so nice. He didn't bother me once regarding me—he knew I cared so much less for him than he did for me. But when we got to the beach Eleanor wasn't there.

"Paul and Jim Donaldson had driven down from New York in Jim's new racer. A little imp got into me. I couldn't help flirting with Paul. Jim was angry because you hadn't come. He and Len were sulking together. It amused me, it amused Paul, too—being a dramatist he played up.

"Jim suggested that we leave the beach and motor home to see if you wouldn't come along. He said it was no fun being three men and one girl. I said that I liked two men to a girl better, and maybe Rex would come, too—that was all that was needed to make my evening complete."

"Oh, Mildred, how could you?" I cried. In my mourning for the dead I forgot that I, too, had always wanted Mildred to care for me.

"Don't, Vera. I've got to tell you, and if you scold me I can't. Len got angry at that and said he wouldn't come, that it was supper time and he was hungry. I scolded then and said it was no fun without Rex. Len began drinking—he never had before. But he kept ordering one drink after another. When we started his hands were shaky and his eyes glared a bit.

"You remember the fork in the road just the other side of Millvale, Vera? I looked at the speedometer before we got there; it said forty-eight miles. I begged Len to slow up—and he put on the brakes suddenly."

"Did he say anything, Mildred—anything before it—it happened?" I asked.

Mildred sobbed wildly. "Yes, he called so I could hear over the rush of wind, 'I didn't mean to frighten you, Mildred, dear. I'd never do anything you didn't want me to—but if I slow up for you you must promise me something. Promise me you won't be sweet to Rex. It kills me to think you like him. I love you, Mildred.' Then he put on the brakes.

"I remember a horrible crash, and I could hear myself shriek as the car lurched at the head of the embankment. I heard Len cry, 'Don't be frightened, darling.' And then, after awhile, I was lying in some bushes at the foot of the hill. I could see Len a little way off. And beyond that the car. I kept calling, but he didn't answer. I heard myself shrieking to him over and over—and then I must have fainted again.

"After awhile there were voices. I knew Jim and Paul had found us —and I was so tired I wanted to go to sleep. The next thing I knew I was in that little white bed at the hospital, and I heard mother sobbing."

"Poor Mildred!" I cried. "Poor Mildred! Oh, I'm so sorry, dear."

She looked at me with strange, old eyes—they looked wise and world weary. "I've killed Len, Vera —and I never want to see Rex again. I might as well be dead. Hate me if you like it—it doesn't matter. Nothing matters as long as I can't have that day to live over again."

Death seemed like a horrible unreality—but there was an even more horrible reality which had to be faced. Father had come to hate Rex with a queer, perverted intensity that made it almost impossible for him to speak to his son.

At first Rex tried very hard. He was patient in the face of all sorts of reproaches. He answered gently and devoted himself to work. I knew that he was making no effort to see Mildred. He knew how it hurt her to be reminded. So matters went on until the beginning of the Winter.

And then my hatred for my father was born.

Norton Gregory was one of those queer, tenacious, hard-souled men who desire most what they are denied. When I revolted from his impudent lovemaking, he became suddenly convinced that his life meant nothing to him unless I were part of it.

FIND SUFFRAGE LEADER DOING MAID'S WORK

New York, Aug. 2.—Finding it much more difficult to obtain food in New York than it was, as a militant suffragette, to avoid it in London jails, Miss Kitty Marion "strangely disappeared" from her suffragist friends in this city last May and nothing was heard of her until it was revealed she was earning a lowly but honest wage as housemaid in a furnished room house at No. 162 West 126th street.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at whose suffrage meetings Miss Marion had been a most fascinating and interesting speaker because of the ordeals of forceful feeding through which she had gone in London, had asked all her friends to seek Miss Marion.

SUFFRAGE IS RIGHT.

When the young woman was found she was happy and seemed almost to regret that she had been "discovered."

"Woman suffrage is right and proper," she said, "but patriotism is of the heart and not for the purse. My profession was the stage and my calling was suffrage. I gave up the stage to work for suffrage and I was told I did much good for the cause.

"In London I was a member of the militant branch and was arrested many times. Four times I was forcibly fed while conducting hunger strikes, and for my efforts the woman suffrage party of England awarded me a medal for valor.

Being of German birth, although English at heart, I was confined in a five-mile limit after the war began and had to report several times weekly to the military authorities. To avoid this bother, I came to New York soon after the burning of the Hurst Park grand stand by militant suffragists."

"You had nothing to do with that?" the reporter asked.

"I would not admit it if I had," she replied. "Here I became identified with the suffragists and made many public addresses, but American women frown upon militant methods.

SOUGHT WORK ON STAGE.

"At the same time I tried to find an engagement on the stage. In London I had been on the musical stage many years, was in the 'Lady Slavey' company and was understudy for Kitty Gordon. But I could find nothing.

"The managers here had nothing for me to do. It became necessary for me to earn a living, and the only thing I could find when I had to have something quickly was this place as chambermaid. I have found a comfortable home until I can better my condition."

At the house, which is operated by Mrs. Jane de Weerdt, Miss Marion is known as Molly Brown. The identity of Miss Marion was revealed by a woman who had heard her as a suffrage orator and who happened to call at the house.

Motor Notes.

By J. C. KERRISON.

The first day of the month saw several of the Boston motor companies moving into their new salesrooms on Beacon street, near the junction of Commonwealth avenue and that thoroughfare. The Becker-Stutz Co. had taken partial possession of their quarters some time ago, but yesterday they moved in bag and baggage and are now ready for business. The Byron Smith Sons Co., distributors of the Cole also moved into their new home, as did the Bishop Motor Co., the Pennsylvania Tire and Rubber Co., while the Oakland had been in possession of its quarters for over two weeks. A. T. Hart, distributor of the National, and J. A. Judd, agent for the Allen, Auburn and Smith-Form-A-Truck, will shortly take up their residence along this row and then the new motor rialto will be a thing of fact.

* * *

Special Factory Representative William A. Harris of the Smith-Form-A-Truck Co. is for the present located with John A. Judd. Mr. Harris came here to assist the John A. Judd Co. in advancing the Smith interests throughout New England, and he brings with him ripe experiences that will prove of benefit to the local organization. Mr. Harris is by no means a stranger in New England and New England ways, as years ago he was associated with a local company and did excellent work in establishing agencies throughout the territory.

* * *

Sales Manager E. J. Moon of the Moon Motor Co. is spending a few days at the Thorndike preparatory to establishing an agency for this line of cars in this section. The Moon is a well-built and well-designed proposition, a car that will stand comparison with any standard lines.

* * *

Frank Foote of the J. W. Bowman Co. is spending a few days in the city of Cleveland looking them over and seeing what is in line for the coming season.

* * *

J. H. MacAlman paid a flying trip to Cleveland Sunday and returned yesterday morning. He was away but one business day and in that period got an insight into what might be expected in the very near future. He was full of smiles and happy as a lord, which means that deliveries will be somewhat hastened, and that the Stearns Knight will come through in good order.

ASQUITH OUTLINES ENGLISH PLANS TO BATTLE FOR TRADE

London, Aug. 2.—Premier Asquith informed Parliament today that Germany was already organizing its industries to attack the markets of the allies and to compete with neutrals with a view to gaining commercial supremacy after the war. Preparations for combatting this policy are necessary, he declared.

The Premier revealed Germany's aims to capture the world's trade after the war during a discussion of steps that Great Britain might have to take. He also announced that he proposed to call a conference of representatives of various parts of the British dominions to consider the empire's trade policy in the light of the recent economic conference held by the allies at Paris.

There was a hint in the premier's address that the free trade policy might be altered.

"I am a strong believer in free trade," he said, "and I am not abandoning my principles, but I must ask the country to recognize the new conditions arising from the world war."

With reference to England's economic condition, the Premier said:

"The omens are satisfactory from a scientific and technical standpoint, as a large number of British industries have shown extraordinary resourcefulness since the war began."

The Premier stated that in view of American uneasiness recently manifested, he wished it known that none of the trade policies to be undertaken would be aimed at neutrals. He reiterated his declaration that the allies would obtain reparation for territory occupied by the enemy.

"The Paris economic conference," the Premier further explained, "was held to convince the enemy that the allies were resolved to wage the war with complete unity and determination in the economic as well as in the military spheres.

"The war had opened Great Britain's eyes to the full meaning of the German system of economic penetration—commercial and financial—and the advantageous use to which it could be put in time of war. Important resolutions were adopted at Paris—most favored nation treatment, protection against dumping, measures to render the allies commercially independent—all drafted by the Board of Trade.

"It is the duty of the allies," added the Premier, "to take every step to secure for their own use the supplies of their own countries and prevent German control. If peace comes before the after-war economic system is adopted sufficient time will be given to enable the arrangements to be concluded without danger of a renewal of German penetration."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were rather weak in New York at noon, the trend having been downward most of the morning. Traders were indecisive. Commission houses were deserted and not a sign of public interest in the market was discernible. Many operators expect the waiting situation to continue for some time. Big interests are said to be looking for cheap stocks for accumulative purposes. One trader remarked that automobile price cutting will probably induce car buying on a scale which will diminish investments and speculation.

Declines at 12 o'clock included American Can ⅝, U. S. Steel ¼, American Smelting ⅛, Car & Foundry ⅜, American Locomotive ½, American Zinc 2, Crucible Steel ⅜, Distillers ⅛, Industrial Alcohol 2, Mexican Petroleum 2¼, Texas Co. 1, Maxwell 1, Studebaker ⅞, Willys-Overland 2⅞, Kennecott ⅛, Canadian Pacific ¼ and New York Central ¼.

Among gains were Baldwin ⅜, Marine preferred ½, Inspiration ⅝, Reading ⅛, Lehigh Valley ½ and New Haven ⅝.

Union Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Anaconda and Chino were unchanged.

In Boston prices were irregular and the market stagnant. United Fruit was the strongest and American Zinc the weakest issue. Aside from those stocks there was nothing of consequence.

United Fruit was up 2¼, after showing 3½ gain during the morning. American Zinc was off 1¼, or at its lowest since the opening.

Gains included Ahmeek 2, Atlantic Gulf and West Indies common ⅜, New Haven 1¼, St. Mary ½ and United Shoe ⅛.

Copper Range was off ¼. Osceola and Quincy were unchanged.

Inactivity also marked Boston Curb trading. At the end of an hour gains included Davis-Daly ⅛, Earl Eagle 1 cent, Rilla 1 cent and Mojave ¼. Among declines were Boston Ely 1-16, Boston & Montana 1 cent, National Zinc 1-16 and Nixon 2 cents. Porcupine Premier, First National and Majestic were unchanged. The most active stocks had been Boston & Montana, Porcupine and Mojave.

Trading was quiet at the start in New York and the market narrow. Fluctuations also were small. Baldwin was the only issue to advance a point or more at once. Business was confined to a few railroads, including Union Pacific as leader, and a number of war specialties. Little attention was given coppers or zinc. At the end of half an hour the tone was easier. Irregularity prevailed later. But the market remained steady. Activity of Union Pacific is due to rumors that its directors will declare a 5 per cent. extra dividend. Bear pressure in early trading was largely directed against motor car issues.

The Boston market was lifeless and without feature except the advance of United Fruit.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

Pennsylvania Railroad's June gross increased $2,962,627 and its net $672,010.

Although weather was unfavorable Boston Elevated's July gross increased nearly $90,000, or about 4¼ per cent.

United Fruit's balance for charges and dividends on August 1 was about $10,000,000. This does not include any of Nipe Bay's sugar profits.

It is understood in Philadelphia that the Baldwin Locomotive Works have received a $15,000,000 shell contract.

Chicago & Northwestern's June gross increased $1,309,034, and its net $479,741.

Copper exports of the United States for July totalled 78,507,520 pounds. For six months 407,151,520.

The Boston Financial News says in a Joplin dispatch: "In spite of the advance in the spelter market there was no advance commensurate in the zinc ore market. The base range for 60 per cent. grades was $55 to $75, while calamine ores brought $45 to $55 for 40 per cent. grade. The disappointment in the advance in the market was such as to retard selling any large tonnage."

When July ended the Wildey Savings Bank had nearly $11,000,000 deposits, an increase of $924,608 in a year.

Producers are said to expect to get nearer 27 cents than 25 cents a pound for what copper they have left unsold for 1916 delivery. A better domestic inquiry is reported.

TEST ACCURACY OF GASOLINE PUMPS

The State Department of Weights and Measures has begun an investigation of gasoline pumps, making a start by testing pumps in Back Bay and Allston districts. There they found 33.7 per cent. of the pumps gave over-measure, while 23.6 per cent. gave less than full measure; 42.7 per cent. were correct. The largest shortage found was 5 per cent. in five gallons of gasoline, while the largest excess was 22.5 per cent. in five gallons of gasoline.

"VIVIAN" TELLS OF LOVE FOR JUDGE'S KIN

New York, Aug. 2.—Letters from one "Vivian," declaring undying love and intention of suicide, have been filed in the Supreme Court in connection with the separation suit brought by Mrs. Eleanor Smith Beach against John Francis Beach, nephew of Supreme Court Justice J. K. Beach of Connecticut.

Beach has a counter suit against his wife, seeking a divorce. He names "the Duke," a "professional ballplayer named Smith," and "an old fellow in Wall Street."

The letters from "Vivian" and "Flora" were introduced by Mrs. Beach in opposition to her husband's motion to have the court order for his arrest vacated. Mrs. Beach obtained the order, fearing her husband would leave the jurisdiction of the court. The "Vivian" letter reads in part as follows:

"My Only Love:

"I hardly know how to begin this letter. First, I shall make no more efforts to see you, as you have shown me quite plainly that you don't want to see me. Just one week ago today you overslept yourself....I knew you were a fickle young kid, but, honestly, Jack, my only dear love, I didn't think you would prove so in such a short time. My mind is fully made up. I am going to end my miserable existence.

"This is no idle threat. I cannot live as I am living, and he swears by all that is sacred that he will kill you if I go to you, write or phone, or you to me. So I shall not have my blood on your hands.

"I shall write you before I go, and, sweetheart, always remember I love you. Don't worry, honey dear, but think how much better off I'll be—will be at rest, will be through with all—all this hateful life. No more pains or aches of any kind.

"Oh, Jack! My Jack! Why did I grow to love you so? I can't get you out of my mind for a moment, and you were so cruel to me yesterday.

"With all my love, heart and soul,

"Yours, VIVIAN."

Another letter submitted by Mrs. Beach was represented as received from Pittsburgh.

"Lots of love and many good wishes from Flora."

Justice Clark declined to vacate the order and held Beach in $1,500 bond.

USE OF ALCOHOL IN RUSSIA INCREASES

Petrograd, Aug. 2.—The Bourse Gazette complains that the consumption of alcohol is again increasing alarmingly throughout Russia, in spite of the restrictive measures taken by the government. To prove its assertion the paper publishes statistics obtained from the Minister of the Interior which shows that during the first five months of the present year, 7,669,706 gallons of alcohol were sold, against 1,386,281 gallons in the corresponding period of last year.

The number of illicit distilleries, according to information given by the Minister of Finance, is seven times larger than a year ago. From January to May 31, over 4,000 persons were arrested for secretly manufacturing and selling alcohol.

PATROLMAN CARR TO BE BURIED FRIDAY

The funeral of Patrolman Patrick J. Carr of Division 12, who died at the Carney Hospital yesterday as the result of an automobile accident on Castle Island bridge, will be held Friday morning from his home, No. 425 East Sixth street, South Boston. A requiem high mass will be celebrated at the Gate of Heaven Church at 9 o'clock. There will be a detail of police in charge of Captain Grant.

ASKS INJUNCTION ON STOCK CHANGE

A bill in equity has been filed in the Superior Court by George A. Meredith of Jamestown, N. Y., against the Art Metal Construction Company, a Massachusetts corporation, seeking an injunction to restrain the company from carrying into effect a vote passed last month to reduce the capital stock of the company from $2,142,000 to $875,120 and then to increase it to $1,457,120 and to issue 60,000 more shares of capital stock.

MARY DEVLIN WILL BE BRIDE MONDAY

Miss Mary A. Devlin, daughter of James Devlin of the Custom House, will on Monday evening become the bride of Cornelius J. O'Leary, a letter carrier attached to the Back Bay station. The ceremony will be performed by Monsignor Denis J. O'Farrell in the rectory of St. Francis de Sales Church, Roxbury. Miss Grace McLaughlin will be bridesmaid and John Cusick best man. A reception will follow at No. 8 Auburn street, Roxbury.

AUTOIST FREED IN DEATH OF WOMAN

Declaring a searchlight on an automobile coming in an opposite direction blinded him Daniel L. Comiskey, twenty-two, a Technology student, of Dover, N. H., pleaded not guilty in the Norfolk County Court today, to a charge of manslaughter in causing the death of Mildred C. Ramey by running over her with his auto in Needham on July 16. The court discharged him.

GIRL KILLED BY TRAIN; BOY DYING

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 2.—Mary Geroux, seven, of No. 76 Pearl street, and George Lemay, six, of the same address, were struck by a Boston & Maine train when they started across the tracks here early today. The girl was killed and the boy is dying.

10 ADDITIONAL RECRUITS AT FT. BANKS

Ten new recruits arrived at Fort Banks, Winthrop, at noon today, bringing the total there to twenty-three. Two of those who arrived today answered the call June 21, but were not allowed to go to Texas because they were under age and had not the consent of their parents. Now they have that consent. They come from Lawrence.

One recruit at the Fort was discharged as physically unfit.

Transportation blanks were received today, so that the sixty recruits waiting at armories throughout the State could be shipped to Fort Banks at once.

Muster-in-rolls for mustering in the members of the militia who declined to take the Federal oath are on their way from Washington to Camp Whitney at Framingham, and when they arrive Captain Ralph McCoy and three expert penmen will begin the work of inscribing the names on the rolls.

Fifty of these militiamen are now at Framingham.

Ambulance Company No. 8 is to be mustered in tomorrow, and the company and the recruits from Fort Banks will go to the border on the same train.

The company of regulars from Fort Banks, which has been doing police duty at Framingham, will stay there till the camp is vacated.

TRUTH, JUSTICE BOSTON AMERICAN EDITORIAL PAGE PUBLIC SERVICE

Wednesday, August 2, 1916

Jackson, Who Did This, and Jefferson, Who Approved It, Were the Two GREATEST DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTS.

A BORDER raid like Villa's, a condition of anarchy of our nearest foreign neighbor on the South, changed the course of political events in the United States, finally defeated for the Presidency the most brilliant orator and statesman of that day, and elected in his stead a man of less talent but of more decision of character—a man who succeeded because he adopted the patriotic American view of that border raid and neighboring anarchy instead of the academic, humanitarian, pacifist and foreign view.

The scene of the anarchy, Florida, was, like Mexico at that time, under the dominion of Spain.

The time was 1817—ninety-nine years ago this very week.

The regular army officer who seized the Spanish territory to prevent the continuance of outrages against American citizens therein and therefrom was MAJOR-GENERAL ANDREW JACKSON.

The Secretary of War who held that anarchy prevailing in Florida was none of our business and that Andrew Jackson and his army ought to be recalled thence was JOHN C. CALHOUN, soon to be Vice-President of the United States and later a candidate for President.

The Secretary of State who opposed Mr. Calhoun, his colleague in President Monroe's Cabinet, was JOHN QUINCY ADAMS. He defended Andrew Jackson, justified his every act in Florida, and in the critical situation against both England and Spain urged and enforced the radical American view of American rights and duties. What HE did in that crisis made him the sixth President of the United States.

The extraordinary likeness between the Florida raids and anarchy in 1817 and the Mexican raids and anarchy in 1916 is, first, in the origin of the misrule, Spanish; second, in the provocation, murder and robbery of American settlers; third, in the punishment, officially ordered from Washington, an expeditionary American army sent sixty miles across the border from Georgia to arrest or disperse the banditti; fourth, in the nature of the Spanish Governor's protest—it might have been written by General Carranza himself!

But here the parallel ends. What Andrew Jackson did he always DID THOROUGHLY. The written instructions given by Secretary of War Calhoun to Major-General Jackson, commanding the United States army in the Southeast, were that if regular troops were insufficient he should "call on the executives of adjacent States for such additional militia as you may deem requisite." All the "adjacent State militia" were already enlisted.

What Jackson did was to recruit in the hills of Tennessee, Carolina and Kentucky 1,000 mounted volunteers. This promptitude and efficiency was unauthorized, and it nearly cost General Jackson his official head.

BUT HOW THE PEOPLE LOVED IT!

The Florida outlaws were pursued to a block fort at Prospect Bluff, where they seemed impregnable. The fort had ten or twelve cannon, one a 32-pounder and three 24s. Within the fortification there had been stored (by British troops in the War of 1812) 2,500 muskets, 500 carbines, 500 fine and steel scabbarded swords, 400 pistols, 300 quarter casks of rifle powder and 763 barrels of common powder. The arms were all new and of excellent quality. The bandits knew how to use them. The Spanish Governor professed to hold these bandits, most of whom were negroes or halfbreeds, as common enemies, but he was unable to suppress them.

Part of Andrew Jackson's little army, commanded by General Gaines, was led into an ambush and several American soldiers killed AND SCALPED Indian fashion. When the block fort was reached, the heaviest American guns made no impression on it. The big guns of the fort fired as often as Americans showed themselves. Jackson's men built a bonfire and made a cannon ball red hot. A gun was loaded with this shot and a light charge of powder and so aimed that the shot fell within the fort.

"Never in the horror laden history of war," writes James Parton, in his Life of Andrew Jackson, "has a single ball been charged with such a mission to destroy as that which then rushed from the cannon's mouth. The first shot penetrated the larger magazine of the fort! An explosion as of a hundred thousand cannons shook Florida. The fort in an instant was a mass of smoking ruins, covering heaps of human beings of every age—dead and dying." Of the 334 inmates of the fort, 270 were killed instantly. The greater number of those that survived the explosion and were taken out alive died soon after.

Later General Jackson proceeded to take possession of several Spanish towns. He arrested, tried by martial law and had executed TWO INFLUENTIAL AND WEALTHY BRITISH TRADERS, Arbuthnot and Ambrister, for inciting the Indians to make depredations on American soil. Finally General Jackson proceeded to Pensacola, then the Spanish capital, put it under martial law, raised the American flag and quickly RESTORED PEACE, ORDER AND PROSPERITY throughout Florida.

General Jackson wrote in his report:

"This measure is justifiable on the immutable principle of self-defence, and cannot but be satisfactory, under existing circumstances, to his Catholic Majesty the King of Spain. . . . His Majesty, as well as the Government of the United States, are alike interested in chastising savage foes who have too long warred with impunity against his Government as well as against citizens of the United States. Under existing treaties between our two Governments the King of Spain is bound to preserve in peace with the citizens of the United States not only his own subjects, but these outlaws. . . . When called upon to fulfil that part of the treaty, His Majesty's Governor pleaded inability, with an acknowledgment that the same foes have acted in open hostility to law and invaded the rights of his Catholic Majesty."

The exact reasons for intervention by the United States as stated by Major-General Jackson, who was by profession a lawyer, are important.

When these events became known in Washington three weeks later—especially the summary execution of the two influential British subjects—all the members of President Monroe's Cabinet except one, John Quincy Adams, felt that General Jackson's conduct could not be justified, that he ought to be recalled, removed from command, his act disavowed, an indemnity offered to Spain and England placated.

MR. ADAMS JUSTIFIED JACKSON'S CONDUCT IN TOTO. Congress was divided. The pacifists raged. The foremost leader in Congress, Henry Clay, denounced Jackson as a military despot, tyrant and usurper. The conflict raged an entire session of Congress. Party lines were broken. THOMAS JEFFERSON, THEN IN RETIREMENT, APPROVED JACKSON'S ACTION.

But the country was soon heard from. President Monroe and all of the Cabinet, except Mr. Calhoun, came over to Mr. Adams' view. In his reply to a menace of war from Spain, Mr. Adams wrote a defence of Jackson's conduct that had a most important effect upon the history of our country. His last words to Spain were a threat:

"If the necessities of self-defence should again compel the United States to take possession of the Spanish forts and places in Florida, it is due to Spain that the United States should declare, with the candor and frankness that becomes us, that another unconditional restoration of them must not be expected; that even the President's confidence in the good faith and ultimate justice of the Spanish Government will yield to the painful experience of continual disappointment; and that, after unwearied and almost unnumbered appeals to them for the performance of their stipulated duties, in vain, the United States will be reluctantly compelled to rely for the protection of their borders upon themselves alone."

History records that after peace and prosperity had been completely restored to Florida by the United States forces, Spain agreed, two years later, to sell Florida to us for five million dollars. And the transfer added glory to our own beloved country and increased, inestimably, the welfare, the liberty and the happiness of the people of that long-suffering province.

History, it is said, repeats itself, and it might now if we had an American eagle like Andrew Jackson instead of a prattling parrot in charge of national affairs.

Wonders of Light and Color Beneath the Sea, and Why Ocean Varies

Why Water Is Blue in Some Places and Green in Others, and Why It Turns Gray in a Storm—Blue Ribbon of the Gulf Stream

By Garrett P. Serviss

"I have read in a book that the blue of the ocean is due to the reflection of the sky color on a clear day, and that when the water looks green it is because it is shallow and the sun rays are reflected from the bottom. This does not satisfy me. I have seen the ocean on a bright day and on another occasion on a very dull day, off Cape Hatteras, where the Gulf Stream passes through the cold waters of the Atlantic, and on both occasions the surface was divided into two colors—a bright blue and a dark green. The division was sharp, almost as a knife-cut, though it was not a straight line, but the contrast of colors was the same when the sky was blue as when it was covered. Will you enlighten me?

"J. J. M."

THE blue of the ocean is not due to reflection from the sky. Pure water itself is blue, as can be proved by looking through a long tube filled with it. On a bright day the intensity of the blue color of the ocean may be accentuated by sky reflection, but the color remains when the sky is clouded.

Where the ocean appears green, as near coasts or over banks, the phenomenon is not due to reflection from the bottom, but to impurities in the water. These impurities have a prevailing yellowish color, which mixed with the blue, transmitted from the water beneath, produces green. When there are no noticeable impurities near the surface the light that is reflected back from a considerable depth shows only the blue of the water, the other colors being absorbed.

Any perfectly pure water will appear blue if the depth from which the light is reflected is sufficiently great. But shallow water does not look blue because the light must pass through a considerable depth of water before the yellow elements of the spectrum are absorbed. The grayish, or slate-colored, hue of the ocean when its surface is disturbed by the wind is due to the intermixture of various reflected rays, and rays that have not penetrated much below the surface.

Gulf Stream Blue Because of Relative Purity of Its Warm Water

The phenomenon of color contrast which you noticed at the edge of the Gulf Stream is familiar to many ocean travelers. The line of division is usually not quite so sharp as you describe it, but the change from green to blue as the Gulf Stream is entered is remarkably abrupt, and no doubt arises from the relative purity of the warm, salt water of the stream.

At the same time it would appear that there are cases in which some peculiar quality of the water may affect the color, although, as far as I am aware, no analysis has shown this to be a fact. The Lake of Geneva, or Lake Leman, which is the wash basin of the River Rhone, is world famous for the exquisite blue of its waters. The Lake of Constance, which may similarly be called the wash basin of the River Rhone, is celebrated for its beautiful green hue.

In the Kanderstag Valley, Switzerland, is a little lake, or pond, which travelers over the Gemmi Pass turn aside to see, whose water is of an indigo blue, so intense that one is tempted to suspect that it has been artificially colored as a bait for tourists.

A marvellous proof that water is really blue has been furnished by nature in the celebrated Blue Grotto of Capri. When you have been rowed into that wonderful cavern from the Bay of Naples, passing through a small opening in the rock, where, if the wind blows toward the shore, you must stoop almost to the gunwales to keep your head from contact with the roof of the passage, you find yourself floating under a great natural dome, with water fifty feet deep beneath you and the atmosphere steeped in blue so brilliant and vivid that you might imagine yourself to be breathing a transparent azure vapor instead of ordinary air.

The magnificent color is due to the fact that the greater part of the light in the cavern has to come through the deep water at the entrance, where the aperture in the rocks, narrow and low above the surface, widens as it descends. The bright sunlight striking the bay outside penetrates the pure water and enters the cavern far below the surface, and when it emerges within the hidden chamber all but the blue rays have been abstracted.

Submarine Promises to Clear Up Many Mysteries Beneath Sea Level

The more transparent the water if the depth be great the darker becomes the color, until sometimes it appears almost black. The best experiments to determine the depth to which daylight penetrates in water have been based upon photography. The Eastern Mediterranean seems to be the most transparent body of water yet experimented with. Photographic plates exposed there at a depth of 328 fathoms, or 1,968 feet, showed the effects of light. But this was blue light, which specially affects a photographic film, and the eye placed at the same depth would probably have perceived no trace of illumination.

When the genius of war, having developed the submarine, as it is able to do regardless of expense, hands over the invention to the more useful but less prodigal genius of science, we shall learn many marvellous things, now only guessed at, concerning the world beneath the sea level.

The Leading Citizen

By William F. Kirk

He shines in every little town,
And splutters like a candle;
His name is Smith or Jones or Brown,
Or any other handle.
He strides through life as big and bold
As if supremely blest,
And every time he catches cold
It settles in his chest.

His dignity is never jarred,
His garb is never rough;
His jaw is square, his eyes are hard,
His voice is deep and gruff.
The children run like frightened quail,
The grown-ups stare and sigh,
The small dog slinks and hides his tail,
When this big gun goes by.

Oh, dear old leading citizen,
The world is kind to you;
You loom above more common men
In all you say or do.
How sweet it is to go through life
Without a single jar;
With none to know except your wife
How big a joke you are.
